The Wellness Wheel

A Wellness Wheel is a tool and visual guide that helps one assess all aspects of their wellness. Each area highlights a different factor of wellness, most commonly known as the 8 Dimensions of Wellness, defined by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA).

Wellness is a continuous and active process of achieving an optimal state of health, where an individual becomes aware of or makes choices towards a more whole-self lifestyle. Using this guide helps us assess this continuous and active process for ourselves!

This month, we are focusing on the INTELLECTUAL portion of the wheel.

Intellectual Wellness describes the ways in which we recognize our creative abilities and seek to find new ways to expand our knowledge and skills.

Group Schedule

Here are our groups for the month.
Feel free to attend as many as you'd like!

October Awareness Month Events

6

A few more important days of acknowledgement happening this month.

Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Started as National Breast Cancer Awareness Month (NBCAM) in October of 1985 - this was a partnership between the American Cancer Society and the pharmaceutical division of Imperial Chemical Industries to promote mammograms as the most effective tool to fight breast cancer.

LGBT History Month

LGBT History Month is an annual month-long observance of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender history, and the history of the gay rights and related civil rights movements. It was founded in 1994 by Missouri high-school history teacher Rodney Wilson.

National Depression and Mental Health Screening Month

Honored to bring awareness to the need for depression awareness and the need for accessible and affordable mental health screenings. A number of different factors can come into play with depression that can include a mix of environmental, genetic, psychological, and biological / biochemical components.

LATINO'S HERITAGE MONTH

Berkeley's Latino heritage is a story of many peoples, migrations, languages, and traditions. Our community reflects the richness of Latin America and the Caribbean. Our community has roots across...

🇲🇽 Mexico & Chicano/a Communities — Deep California roots and important contributions to labor, civil rights, education, arts, and community organizing. Cultural traditions include Día de los Muertos, mural art, tamales, mole, pozole, and pan dulce.

🌎 Central America — Salvadoran, Guatemalan, Honduran, Nicaraguan, and other communities bring traditions such as pupusas, tamales, marimba music, Indigenous textiles, dance, storytelling, and strong family and community traditions.

🌎 South America — Chilean, Argentine, Peruvian, Colombian, Venezuelan, Ecuadorian, Bolivian, and other communities contribute traditions including tango, cumbia, vallenato, Andean music, mate, weaving, dance, and diverse culinary traditions. Berkeley has a particularly important connection to Chilean exile and Latin American cultural movements through La Peña Cultural Center, founded in Berkeley in 1975.

🇧🇷 Brazil — A reminder that Latino does not always mean Hispanic or Spanish-speaking. Brazilian culture reflects Indigenous, African, and European influences through Portuguese language, samba, capoeira, forró, percussion, dance, and food. Berkeley is home to Berkeley Capoeira on San Pablo Avenue, where capoeira is taught as an Afro-Brazilian art combining movement, music, history, and culture.

🏝️ The Caribbean — Puerto Rican, Cuban, Dominican, and other Caribbean communities bring bomba, plena, son, rumba, merengue, bachata, salsa, drumming, dance, food, and rich Afro-Caribbean traditions.

Many Paths to Berkeley

People have come to Berkeley from Latin America and the Caribbean for work, family, education, political exile, refuge, and new opportunities. UC Berkeley has also created important connections with Latin America through generations of students, scholars, researchers, artists, and educators. Its Center for Latin American & Caribbean Studies continues to connect the university and broader community with Latin America and the Caribbean.

The Story Continues

Newer immigrants continue to shape Berkeley as workers, caregivers, parents, students, educators, artists, entrepreneurs, organizers, and professionals.

Latino Heritage Month is a time to celebrate the many cultures, histories, and everyday contributions that continue to make Berkeley a vibrant and diverse community.

Día de los Muertos

Día de los Muertos (Day of the Dead) is a traditional Mexican holiday celebrated from October 31st to November 2nd celebreated to honor and remember deceased loved ones by welcoming their spirits back to the physical world.

Though rooted in pre-Hispanic indigenous rituals, it has merged with Catholic traditions over time and continues to be an important part of connection, family, and joy within communities and households all over the world.

October 31st:
Setting up for the Spirits

For 24hrs, this time is spent creating alters for the children who left us too soon. Families begin setting up and preparing for their spirits' return with small toys and sweet treats placed onto the altar.

November 1st:
Día de los Inocentes
(Day of the Innocents)

Dedicated to the souls of those children, families decorate graves and altars with colorful items, candies, and playful offerings to celebrate their young loved ones and make sure they are well taken care of.

November 2nd:
Día de los Fieles Difuntos
(All Souls' Day)

This day honors the souls of adults. Families gather at grave sites and within their communities worldwide bringing food, music, and other gifts to celebrate and remember the lives of their ancestors

LEARNING EVERYDAY

Lifelong learning is something we can do to boost our mental well-being, foster a sense of purpose, maintain curiosity about the world, and stay resilient in the face of life's challenges. Here are some examples of ways to keep our brains active and engaged!

- Creative Hobbies – Engaging in low-pressure activities like drawing, journaling, painting, photography, or crafting can be therapeutic and a way to build skills through play.
- Community Workshops or Libraries – Local libraries and community centers often host free or low-cost skill-building sessions—from writing to cooking to digital literacy.
- Peer Support Groups – Join groups (in person or online) that combine mental health support with creative outlets like storytelling, art, or music.
- Volunteering Opportunities – Volunteering your time at an organization within your interest range like helping at an animal shelter can build confidence and teach new skills in a supportive setting.
- Adult Education Programs – Many cities offer adult learning or continuing education classes that are inclusive, low-cost, and often designed with accessibility in mind.
- Guided Video Tutorials – Whether it's learning to bake bread, play guitar, or code, video tutorials make complex skills feel more approachable.
- Mindful Learning Practices – Pairing learning with mindfulness (like taking a quiet walk while listening to an educational podcast) allows for growth without feeling overwhelmed.
- Creative Journaling or Idea Notebook – Even jotting down ideas, doodles, or small goals regularly can spark creative thinking and track personal growth over time.

No matter the approach, the key is to start small, be kind to yourself, and let curiosity and fun lead the way.

Healthy Habits for Intellectual Wellness

- Ask questions about things you do not understand.
- Attend a peer-support group where people exchange ideas and experiences.
- Explore a topic you have always been curious about.
- Read for ten minutes a day.
- Get a free library card.
- Visit your local library and explore the shelves.
- Try an audiobook if reading feels difficult.
- Keep important items in the same place whenever possible.
- Write things down instead of expecting yourself to remember everything.
- Break large tasks into smaller steps.
- Set a timer for ten minutes and focus on one activity.
- Take short breaks when your mind becomes tired.
- Put your phone away for a few minutes while completing an important task.
- Practice a skill you would like to become better at.
- Draw without worrying about whether it looks “good.”
- Color in a coloring book.
- Learn how to cook a new meal.
- Take a free community class.
- Try another strategy when the first one does not work.
- Give yourself time to think instead of feeling pressured to decide immediately.
- Consider how a decision may affect you tomorrow, not only today.
- Practice listening without immediately preparing your response.
- Learn from people of different ages and generations.
- Ask yourself whether a thought is a fact, assumption, or opinion.
- Remember that lived experience is also a source of knowledge.
