I. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

A. BACKGROUND, SCOPE, AND METHODOLOGY

The Berkeley Public Library (the Library) operates five library branches throughout the City of Berkeley. A five-member Board of Library Trustees (BOLT) oversees the Library. Due to turnover in leadership positions and organizational instability, the BOLT requested a comprehensive review and evaluation be completed by an independent third party to improve Library operations and services.

This organizational assessment was designed to identify opportunities of improvement in governance, management, staff relations, operational performance, policies and procedures, and community partnerships. The assessment was conducted between July and November 2018 and consisted of four major phases: 1) project initiation and management, 2) fact finding, 3) assessment of operational performance, and 4) reporting. The fact-finding phase included interviews, document reviews, an all-staff survey (see Appendix A), and research into best practices.

B. THEMES

This study was sponsored by the BOLT, for the purpose of assessing the organization to ensure it is optimally governed and organized to serve the Berkeley community. Four major themes rose to the surface during this assessment—governance, cultural transformation, change management, and community-centered work.

GOVERNANCE

The BOLT is responsible for setting policy direction and delegating the authority to implement policies to the Director of Library Services (Director). However, this policy governance model is not being fully utilized by the BOLT. The BOLT is currently operating at more of an operational level than a strategic level and roles and responsibilities between the BOLT, Director, and management team are often blurred.

To implement a true policy governance model, the BOLT should work to define clearer roles and responsibilities and consistently operate within those boundaries. The development of bylaws and the implementation of consistent board self-assessment and onboarding practices will complement this work. By gaining alignment on roles, responsibilities, and organizational goals, the BOLT can begin creating a shift in organizational culture in preparation for a new Director.

CULTURAL TRANSFORMATION

A healthy working culture relies on clarity, consistency, and accountability. Currently, Library performance management processes, such as performance evaluations and progressive discipline, are not adequately utilized to encourage individual performance. Staff report that some managers and front-line supervisors do not have the resources, support, or incentives they need to effectively manage, resulting in inconsistent application of expectations and compromising organizational culture. Furthermore, fragmented policies and procedures contribute to a lack of clear expectations.

Establishing trust between staff and management can only be successful with stability in the Director position and may take several years to fully achieve. To create a more transparent and trusting culture, the Library should support staff through defined expectations, employee performance management, management development, standardized onboarding, and consistent application of policies and procedures.

CHANGE MANAGEMENT

Change at the Library is continuous and inevitable. However, Library staff and leadership report challenges in effectively managing, encouraging, and adopting change within the organization. Without buy-in, commitment, mitigated resistance, elimination of fear, and consistent adoption across the organization, the Library may not realize the full benefit of changes designed to help the organization better serve its community.

To improve roll out of new systems and processes, the Library should establish a change management process for organizational changes. This work should be complemented by clear and consistent communication practices and the implementation of a mutually understood decision-making framework.

COMMUNITY-CENTERED WORK

The Library is a hub for many vital community resources. However, the Library's operating environment and culture poses barriers to providing resources that are relevant and responsive to community desires and needs. To overcome these challenges, the Library should focus on innovation, community engagement, community service, outcomes-based program evaluation, and build on ongoing work ensuring that Library spaces are safe and inclusive. By placing the primary focus on patron needs, the Library can continue to provide cutting-edge services to the Berkeley community.

C. OBSERVATIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Observations and recommendations were grouped into three tiers: 1) Enterprise Solutions, 2) Strategic Solutions, and 3) Tactical Solutions.

	TIER		DEFINITION	RESPONSIBILITY
1	Enterprise Solutions	➤	Policy and structural improvement areas that impact all units and fall under the purview of the Library Board of Trustees and/or Director.	BOLT and Director
2	Strategic Solutions	➤	Common improvement areas across all or most the Library units.	Director and Managers
3	Tactical Solutions	➤	Specific, day-to-day improvement areas within one or more Library units.	Director, Managers, and Staff

Tier 1, Tier 2, and Tier 3 observations and recommendations are summarized in the following table. Detailed observations and recommendations for all three tiers are provided in Section IV.

OBSERVATIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS
TIER 1
1	Observation	The Library's governing environment reduces organizational effectiveness and the ability of the Library to deliver services to the broader community.
	Recommendation	Adopt a policy governance model to focus the BOLT on policy and strategy with delegation of operations and employee management to the Director.
2	Observation	Because the Library lacks an active operating plan, challenges exist with evaluating priorities and ensuring programs/services effectively support the Library's mission.
	Recommendation	In alignment with the City of Berkeley's 2018-19 Strategic Plan, develop a five-year outcome-based operating plan and supporting unit work plans to unify and focus Library efforts.
3	Observation	The Library lacks a data-driven performance reporting framework to monitor and evaluate programs, services, and operations.
	Recommendations	Establish a consistent outcome-based performance reporting framework to keep the BOLT and the community informed on progress toward goals.
4	Observation	Lack of leadership alignment, defined priorities, and constructive employee engagement at the Library has contributed to a culture characterized by low levels of trust, collaboration, and cooperation.
	Recommendation	Transform the Library's operating culture by taking measures to align leadership, clarify roles and responsibilities, support employee accountability, and facilitate open lines of communication.
5	Observation	The BOLT has operated without bylaws since its inception, instead relying on the City's Commissioners' Manual, which provides inadequate governance guidance.
	Recommendation	Establish bylaws that are consistent with State law, City policy, BOLT needs, and best practices.

		OBSERVATIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS
6	Observation	BOLT members were provided inconsistent levels of onboarding, resulting in opportunities for enhanced board governance and better understanding of Library operations.
	Recommendations	Establish consistent Board onboarding, education, and evaluation to ensure new members are properly prepared to serve in an oversight role and continuously improve governance.
7	Observation	The Library has experienced frequent Director turnover, potentially complicating the upcoming Director recruitment process.
	Recommendation	Conduct and facilitate the Director recruitment process using a third party, incorporating input from management and staff as appropriate, and develop a Director onboarding plan.
8	Observation	The Library struggles to sustain changes effectively and engage staff to adopt new systems, processes, and programs. In the past, change management has been perceived as top-down and ineffective despite efforts to engage staff.
	Recommendation	Create a culture of deliberate change management to ensure new programs and initiatives are effectively developed, communicated, implemented, and adopted.
9	Observation	Some employees report dissatisfaction with historical communication practices, contributing to distrust between staff and management.
	Recommendation	Establish formal communication protocols that encourage productive and frequent two-way communication between management and staff.
10	Observation	Some staff report a lack of understanding about how, where, or when decisions are made and felt that decisions impacting their work are often made in a unilateral and hierarchical manner.
	Recommendation	Develop a decision-making framework that aligns with the operating plan to provide additional transparency in the Library's decision-making processes.
11	Observation	There are opportunities to further develop managers and supervisors to better engage employees and establish a culture of accountability.
	Recommendation	Provide ongoing mentorship, training, and institutional support to enable managers and supervisors to consistently apply Library policies and set performance expectations.
12	Observation	Performance evaluations are inconsistent, cumbersome, and could be better leveraged to develop Library employees.
	Recommendation	Ensure performance evaluations are beneficial for both the Library and employees by integrating the review process with a growth and development plan, setting annual goals, and streamlining the evaluation process.
13	Observation	The progressive disciplinary process could be better leveraged to hold staff accountable to City of Berkeley and Library policies and standards of conduct.
	Recommendation	Provide staff training on the progressive disciplinary process and support standard and consistent utilization by front-line supervisors and management.
14	Observation	Exit interviews are not always completed or analyzed to improve employee retention, particularly at the management level.

	OBSERVATIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS
	Recommendation	Implement consistent exit interview procedures and conduct a semi-annual analysis to evaluate factors contributing to employee turnover and retention.
15	Observation	The Library's human resources (HR) function is reliant on manual processes and lacks sufficient staff resources to fulfill operational demands.
	Recommendation	Increase Library HR staffing levels to support cultural transformation initiatives, modernize processes, and perform other vital HR functions.
16	Observation	The Library has encountered resistance to moving from a risk-averse and inward-facing culture toward one of innovation.
	Recommendation	Promote a culture of innovation by engaging the community, developing an innovation evaluation framework, and exploring peer exchange opportunities.
	TIER 3
17	Observation	Many Library policies and procedures are not current, resulting in potential inconsistent expectations and service delivery.
	Recommendation	Document key policies and procedures to provide consistency to employees and patrons.
18	Observation	The Library lacks a consistent method to evaluate public programs and ensure they adequately address community needs and priorities.
	Recommendation	Establish a consistent program evaluation process and reporting system to ensure programs are advancing the Library's mission, respond to community needs, and are delivered equitably.
19	Observation	Employee onboarding practices are fragmented and inconsistent, resulting in suboptimal institutional support for new employees.
	Recommendation	Create a systematic onboarding process to increase employee retention, productivity, and morale.
20	Observation	Many Library employees are eligible for retirement, which could impact operations and service delivery.
	Recommendation	Develop a strategy to address succession planning for key positions to ensure operational continuity and maintenance of relationships with stakeholders.
21	Observation	Similar to other urban libraries, the Library face challenges in creating a safe and welcoming space for all patrons.
	Recommendation	Continue developing a safety program in accordance with best practices, including an employee safety committee, developing a comprehensive safety plan, and providing regular staff training.
22	Observation	The Library's community engagement efforts are often reactive, resulting in untapped opportunities to better serve Berkeley's diverse community.
	Recommendation	Develop proactive community engagement practices to ensure library services address the needs and priorities of all community members.
23	Observation	The Library is in the process of developing a Collection Management Plan.
	Recommendation	Utilize best practice research to inform the development of the Collection Management Plan.

D.   IMPLEMENTATION AND PRIORITIZATION

In order to provide the Library with guidance for implementing the recommendations over the next year, we prepared an implementation plan. This implementation includes:

- Recommendation
- Suggested priority
- Suggested effort level
- Suggested schedule
- Task owner (this is not a comprehensive list of all staff who may be involved, but rather the role(s) that is primarily responsible for accomplishing this task)
- Whether the work can be performed internally or will require external resources

Recommendations have been prioritized to focus on those that most directly support the four primary themes of our findings—governance, cultural transformation, change management, and community-centered work.

The suggested schedule is highly dependent on the Director recruitment process. Some work—especially that around governance, culture, and accountability—should be in progress before a new Director is onboarded. Other work, like creating a full strategic plan, should wait until after the new Director is in place. This schedule should be viewed as a flexible plan that can shift as circumstances change.

The implementation plan is provided below.

II. BACKGROUND, SCOPE, AND METHODOLOGY

A.   BACKGROUND

The Library has served the people of Berkeley since 1893 and strives to foster a spirit of exploration, lifelong learning, the joy of reading, and the pursuit of information and knowledge for all ages and cultures. The Library is one of the most heavily used libraries in California, serving a local population of over 121,000 residents and more from the surrounding area. The Library has five branches: Claremont Branch, North Branch, West Branch, Tarea Hill Pittman South Branch, and the Central Library in downtown Berkeley, which also houses the Library's administrative offices.

The BOLT, a five-member appointed administrative board, administers and oversees the Library. As of January 2018, all BOLT members are serving their first term. Together with the Director, the BOLT sets policy direction and leads the Library. However, the Library has experienced significant turnover in the Director position. Since 2014, the Library has been led by three Directors, one Interim Director, and one Acting Director. Turnover in key leadership positions has contributed to organizational instability, impacting employee morale and the Library's culture.

The BOLT requested that a comprehensive review and evaluation be completed by an independent third party to improve Library operations and services.

B.   SCOPE AND METHODOLOGY

This organizational assessment was designed to identify opportunities for improvement in governance, management, staff relations, operational performance, policies and procedures, and community partnerships. The study was conducted between July 2018 and November 2018. The analysis was informed by interviews, document reviews, an all-staff survey, and research into best practices from similarly situated libraries across the country. Interviews were conducted with the BOLT, Acting Director, union representatives, employees at various levels and branches, and external stakeholders.

The project consisted of four major phases:

1. Project Initiation and Management: This phase concentrated on comprehensive project planning and project management, including identifying employees to interview, identifying documents to review, communicating results, and establishing regular reports on project status.

2. Fact Finding: This phase included interviews, conducting an all-staff survey, document review, and best practice research. We worked with Library staff to obtain the most currently available information and insights.

   o   Interviews: We conducted 26 interviews, including five BOLT members, six managers, two supervisors, eight front-line staff, and five community partners.

   o   All-staff survey: All Library employees were invited to participate in a confidential survey that asked about Library strengths and opportunities for improvement. Of the 134 survey requests sent, we received 80 responses, a 59.7% response rate. Of these 80 respondents, six identified as a manager or supervisor, 12 identified as a first level supervisor, and 62 identified as not a manager or supervisor (i.e., front-line staff). While this survey is a useful tool to identify staff sentiment, the results are not statistically significant and it is not fully representative since participation was less than 100%.

- o Document review: We reviewed documents including policies, procedures, planning documents, and others.

- o BOLT meeting observation: A representative from our team observed a BOLT meeting on September 17, 2018. Additionally, meeting minutes and audio for several prior meetings in 2017 and 2018 were reviewed.

- o Best practice research: Based on the opportunities for improvement identified, we conducted research to ascertain best practices found in other libraries, local governments, and professional association guidance.

3. Assess Operational Performance: Based on information gathered, we evaluated the importance, impact, and scope of our observations in order to develop recommendations designed specifically to improve operations at the Library.

4. Reporting: This phase concluded the project by reviewing draft observations and recommendations with the Acting Director to validate facts and confirm the practicality of recommendations, as well as providing a finalized report and presenting results to the BOLT.

III. COMMENDATIONS

Based on the insights gathered through interviews, survey responses, and document review, it is evident that the Library has several commendable organizational attributes. Some examples are provided below.

- Community Resources: The Library provides access to literature, knowledge, and other educational services and tools to the Berkeley community through its five branch locations, large collection size, and established and experimental programming. The Library serves as a hub for the community, with over one million annual visitors.

- Collections: Over the past year, use of the Library's collections increased due the development of strategies based on input from over 4,200 community members. In addition, through a collaboration with the Berkeley Unified School District, students are able to use their school IDs to check out Library eBooks. The Library has also incorporated an inclusive and data-driven process for selecting, deselecting, and refreshing collections by frontline staff.

- Employee Commitment: Based on survey results and interviews, many Library employees—from front line staff to supervisors to managers—are dedicated to and take pride in their work. Many employees also have a deep knowledge of the Library's institution and history.

- Facilities: To serve its community, the Library provides five physical locations—Central, Claremont Branch, North Branch, West Branch, and Tarea Hill Pittman South Branch. All branch locations have been remodeled in the past six years to ensure modern facilities. The Library also recently updated an area of the Central Library to create a new patron experience.

- Strong Funding and Support: Strong public funding is additionally supported by the Library's partnership organizations: The Berkeley Public Library Foundation and the Friends of the Berkeley Public Library. Both organizations lead highly valuable work to engage community, donor, and volunteer support of the Library.

- Utilization of cross-functional, interdepartmental committees: The Library operates several cross-functional committees to facilitate communication and attempt to proactively address potential issues, including the Safety Committee, Library Council, Joint Labor-Management Committee, and Labor Relations Review Council. Use of these committees provides significant opportunity to collaborate and communicate across branches and levels of staff in the Library and City of Berkeley.

We would like to thank Library staff, management, and leadership for their participation in this study.

IV. OBSERVATIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Based on the input gathered from interviews, document review, benchmarking, and comparisons to best practices, we prepared a comprehensive three-tiered set of observations and recommendations, including:

1. Enterprise Solutions: Observations and recommendations for policy and structural improvement areas that impact all units and are the responsibility of the BOLT and Director (Library leadership).

2. Strategic Solutions: Observations and recommendations for common improvement areas across all or most units and are the responsibility of the Director, Deputy Director, and managers (Library management).

3. Tactical Solutions: Observations and recommendations for specific, day-to-day issues within one or more units and are the responsibility of managers, supervisors, and front-line staff (Library staff).
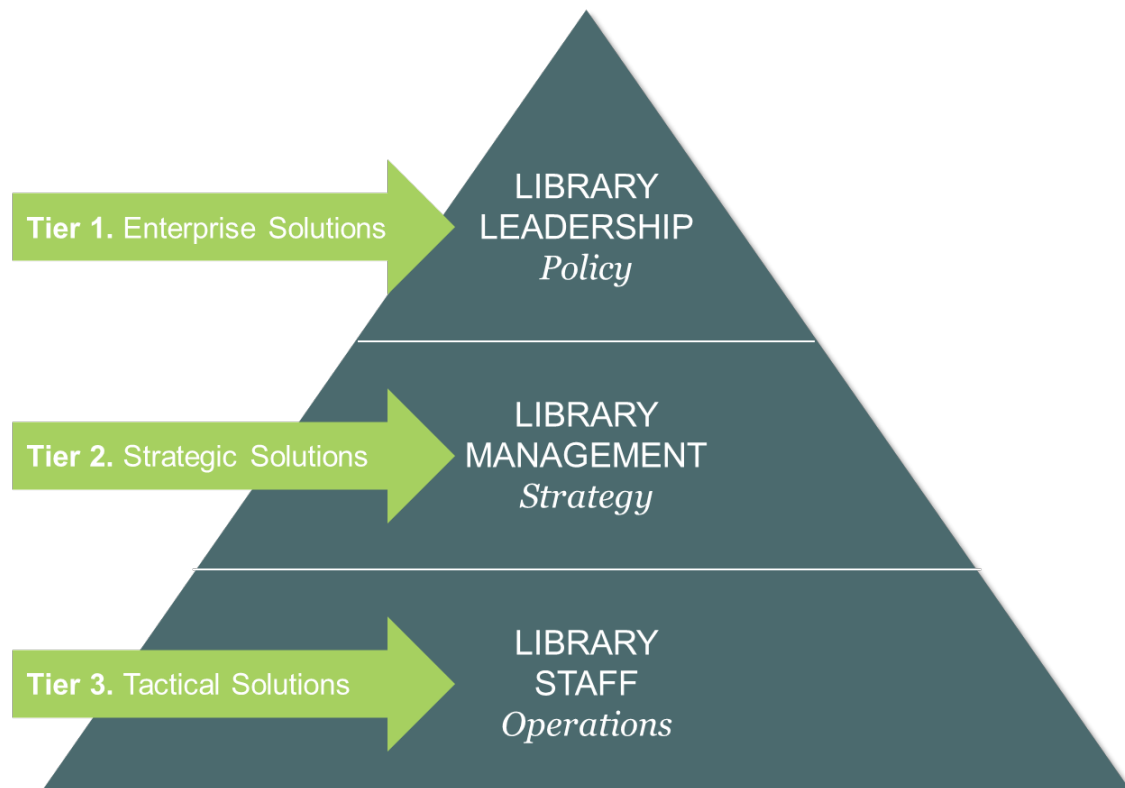

The observations and recommendations for each tier are detailed below.

A. TIER 1: ENTERPRISE

Enterprise observations and recommendations are areas of policy and structural improvements that impact all units and are the responsibility of the BOLT and the Director.

GOVERNANCE

1	OBSERVATION	The Library's governing environment reduces organizational effectiveness and the ability of the Library to deliver services to the broader community.
	RECOMMENDATION	Adopt a policy governance model to focus the BOLT on policy and strategy with delegation of operations and employee management to the Director.

The BOLT has the responsibility to set policy direction and delegate the authority to implement adopted policies to the Director. However, this policy governance model is not consistently utilized by the BOLT, which often delves into operational issues such as management decisions and staff complaints. As a result, BOLT members sometimes participate in discussions that should occur between staff and management. Not only is this not the best use of their time, but the insertion of BOLT members in day-to-day issues can perpetuate a sense of illegitimacy among Library management, effectively undermining their role, authority, and expertise. This practice is typical of organizations with high leadership turnover and contributes to a perception of mistrust among the BOLT, management, and staff.

Under a policy governance model, the primary responsibilities of the BOLT include the following:

- Framework: Establish the Library's mission, vision, and strategy, thereby defining the library's place in the Berkeley community and ensuring it serves residents' needs.
- Direction: Set the direction for the organization by establishing goals and organizational performance measures, monitoring against the operating plan, and developing policies related to BOLT operations.
- Accountability: Monitor the behavior and performance of fellow BOLT members and the Director, including hiring and evaluating the Director, monitoring financial and operational performance, and serving as a final court of appeals within the organization when other venues for resolution have been exhausted.
- Good will and support: Represent the organization to external parties and provide support and counsel to the Director. A fundamental role of the BOLT members is to position the library within the community to support larger citywide goals related to education, public safety, economic development, diversity, and the environment.

Within the specific context of the Library, there are several key points to consider when implementing the policy governance model, including adhering to redefined roles and responsibilities, establishing clear communication processes, and providing regular evaluations of the Director.

- Roles and responsibilities definition: To effectively lead the organization, the BOLT, the Director, management, and staff should respect and advocate for mutual understanding of each other's roles and responsibilities. The BOLT has a duty to balance setting the large-scale direction of the organization with monitoring ongoing Library operations. Therefore, the BOLT should not be focused on day-to-day operations, but should delegate that task to the Director. BOLT members should recognize and support the Director in managing Library staff and programming. Appendix B provides samples of board and director roles, responsibilities, and operating policies.

- Communication: Because the Library operates in the social and political environment of the Berkeley community, BOLT members may have social or professional relationships with Library staff. Given this context, it is especially important to establish and adhere to appropriate channels of communication between staff, management, and leadership, with the Director as the primary conduit for communications related to day-to-day Library operations and issues. For example, a grievance procedure for staff issues is in place via the collective bargaining agreement, and the BOLT should strongly encourage and expect staff to fully utilize due process rather than bringing issues before the BOLT or to individual BOLT members. Within this structure, it is not appropriate for staff who are represented by a union to speak during the public comment section. Fully utilizing the established communication channels will help the BOLT use their time and energy most effectively to support the critical work of the Library in serving the Berkeley community in accordance with its priority purpose. In turn, the BOLT should continue receiving regular operational reports from the Director, consistent with current practices.

- Director evaluation: The BOLT should conduct an annual evaluation of the Director based on measurable outcomes that were clearly established at the onset of the evaluation period. The BOLT may wish to explore the option of obtaining input from other Library employees as an additional input to the evaluation, although the primary driver of the evaluation's results should be focused on outcomes. Appendix C includes a sample director evaluation.

To implement a policy governance model, a facilitated series of work sessions with BOLT members and Library administration should be held to define the Library's governance model and clarify roles and responsibilities. Ideally, these work sessions would take place following the appointment of a new Director; however, efforts to focus the BOLT on larger policy decisions will help smooth the new Director's onboarding and therefore should not be delayed.

Adopting a policy governance model has multiple benefits for the Library. By allowing management to focus their efforts on strategies and plans that align with BOLT-established direction, the Library's culture may be improved by unifying the BOLT, management, and staff. The policy governance model can help the BOLT function more effectively and efficiently by giving members the bandwidth required to focus on operating plans and vision. By placing an emphasis on the BOLT as a servant-leader for the residents of Berkeley, this model also centers the organization's focus on community needs. Finally, it promotes a healthy culture of trust and teamwork between the BOLT, management, and Library staff by delegating appropriate tasks and providing sufficient authority to conduct operations.

OPERATIONAL PLANNING

2	OBSERVATION	Because the Library lacks a comprehensive operating plan, challenges exist with evaluating priorities and ensuring programs and services effectively support the Library's mission.
	RECOMMENDATION	In alignment with the City of Berkeley's 2018-19 Strategic Plan, develop a five-year outcome-based operating plan and supporting unit work plans to unify and focus Library efforts.

Currently, the Library does not have a multi-year operating plan in place to define priorities, drive budgets and annual work plans, and guide ongoing strategic decisions and initiatives. The Library's historical planning processes tended to span two to three years, but have not been adhered to due to Director turnover. In 2015, the Library created a strategic plan for the 2016-2018 period; however, due to leadership turnover and lack of staff buy-in, the plan was not effectively adopted or implemented. Starting in 2018, the Library began the process of creating short-term work plans based on three priorities from the City's Strategic Plan. However, many units have not yet developed work plans that align with the Department's work plan. As a result, Library leadership, management, and staff pursue the Library's mission by relying on fragmented approaches based on outdated priorities rather than present-day business needs.

To continue driving the organization forward in serving the diverse and dynamic community of Berkeley, the Library should develop a multi-year operating plan. This plan should align with the City's strategic plan and include clear goals, objectives, performance measures, and staffing plans to ensure the Library has the right people in the right positions to achieve desired goals and objectives. In particular, the City of Berkeley's mission and core values should guide the operating plan development process.

Operating plans should be a practical actionable guide for the next two to five years of Library activities, ultimately setting the direction of the organization and enabling the new Director to implement changes in accordance with BOLT priorities. The plan should include the Library's key strategies, objectives, and priorities; unit goals and work plans; and outcomes-based performance measures to track progress (Recommendation #3). Collaboration across all levels of Library employees, including staff, management, and leadership, can also facilitate alignment around critical work. Therefore, the plan development process may serve as a useful tool to build trust and establish improved working relationships throughout the organization.

The operating plan, in combination with the City's Strategic Plan, should also serve as a high-level decision-making framework that provides a foundation for evaluating new initiatives. For example, will an initiative support the long-term vision for the community? Will it help to achieve the Library's mission? Will it achieve Library-wide goals and objectives? Will it align with the values of the organization? This comprehensive planning framework will help the Library to evaluate and prioritize issues in an evolving political environment.

PERFORMANCE REPORTING

3	OBSERVATION	The Library lacks a data-driven performance reporting framework to monitor and evaluate programs, services, and operations.
	RECOMMENDATION	Establish a consistent outcome-based performance reporting framework to keep the BOLT and the community informed on progress toward goals.

Currently, the Library lacks a data-driven performance reporting framework to monitor and evaluate programs, services, and operations. This can lead to misplaced perceptions of the value derived from certain work and confusion regarding which tasks, programs, and projects are best serving the community. Within this context, it is easy to place high importance on anecdotal and ad-hoc information, resulting in recognition for some work, while other work is disregarded. In addition, it is difficult for the BOLT, leadership, management, staff, and community members to understand a coherent, comprehensive, and consistent picture of Library performance and track large-scale progress toward mission-critical goals.

As a component of its operating plan, the Library should establish a performance reporting framework consisting of key performance indicators (KPIs) to provide meaningful, balanced information about Library operations to guide management decisions, promote transparency and accountability, complement anecdotal evidence with data, and steer the future direction of the Library.

KPIs should be established using a collaborative, facilitated process to ensure that measures are meaningful, appropriate, and align with the Library's operating plan. Each performance measure should have a clearly documented description (what it is), objective (what it is striving to measure), definition (how it is gathered or calculated), and reporting frequency (quarterly or annually). While KPIs should primarily focus on measuring outcomes (the impact of a program activity), some industry standard output indicators (the results of a program activity) like circulation numbers may also be included.

Typically, organizations establish between two and five performance measures for each critical area included in the operating plan. The Library should establish the following two layers of performance indicators:

1. Library-wide performance indicators tied to strategic goals and focused on patron service. These should be regularly reported to the BOLT.
2. Unit performance measures that cascade from City- and Library-wide goals and reflect key milestones identified in work plans. These should be regularly reported to Library leadership.

This framework will help the Library track and present a coherent picture of organizational performance based on both quantitative and qualitative data. It can also serve as the basis to support management decisions using a data-driven approach.

CULTURE

4	OBSERVATION	Lack of leadership alignment, defined priorities, and constructive employee engagement at the Library has contributed to a culture characterized by low levels of trust, collaboration, and cooperation.
	RECOMMENDATION	Transform the Library's culture by taking measures to align leadership, clarify roles and responsibilities, support employee accountability, and facilitate meaningful communication.

The Library's culture is characterized by high levels of individual engagement, but low levels of trust and accountability. In the all-staff survey, many respondents described the culture of the Library as dedicated, diverse, and accessible; but also dysfunctional, divisive, stagnant, hostile, and opaque.

An especially influential element affecting Library culture has been recent anomalous turnover in the BOLT and Director positions. Turnover has required the organization to continually adapt to a changing and dynamic leadership team with differing priorities and communication styles. Within this type of high stress environment, it is common for individuals to reject any additional changes and place their primary focus on staff needs, rather than centering the conversation on patron service. It is also typical for leadership to focus on the loudest voices and make decisions based on anecdotal information provided by select individuals, rather than data and input from a larger group of staff. Increasing the effectiveness of the Library's culture is reliant upon clear expectations, aligned efforts, accountability, and transparent communication.

A culture of collaboration requires a clear, mutually understood sense of ownership and accountability. The Library's management and staff report that these traits are often lacking in initiatives and daily work due to fluctuating leadership, priorities, and expectations. While the Library has a detailed progressive discipline policy in place, staff report that it does not appear to be consistently implemented by supervisors and managers. This enables certain employees to operate with a degree of impunity, compromises trust, and impedes staff morale. In addition, past attempts by management at communication, decision-making, and change management have been perceived by some staff as top-down, hierarchical, and ineffective, which has impacted trust within the organization. In this way, the Library's existing culture has negatively affected working relationships and the Library's ability to fulfill on its mission. To transform its operating culture, the Library should consider the following strategies:

- Unified leadership vision and tone: To improve collaboration at the Library, leadership should first align to establish a cohesive, unified tone. The BOLT's policy and strategy should be clear and aligned with the Library management. These parties should work to recognize their collective impact on the workforce, operations, and mission. Positive and connected leadership directly impacts culture by creating a shared vision for success, a path for achievement, establishing clear expectations, and working as a united team.

- Clarify roles and responsibilities: As detailed in Recommendation #1, setting clear expectations around roles and responsibilities can improve the relationship between leadership, management, and staff. The BOLT should actively strive to foster a culture of mutual respect by carrying out their specific roles and setting appropriate boundaries with operational and personnel management including communications with staff. Furthermore, Library management should make it clear how employees working at each branch and each level fit into the Library's strategic vision. By demonstrating how everyone's collaborative efforts contribute to the Library's success, employees can better understand their role and operate as a team.

- Define operational policies and procedures: Poor employee morale is often exacerbated by a lack of consistently applied operating rules and processes. The Library lacks a personnel manual, which has resulted in unclear expectations and tolerance of unacceptable practices. The Library should work with City of Berkeley HR to develop comprehensive personnel policies to define expectations for working at the organization. To be effective, policies must be known to all Library employees, apply uniformly to all employees, and be consistently and appropriately enforced.

- Develop transparent, two-way communication protocols: Communication fosters the development of common values and goals, ultimately fostering a sense of teamwork and collaboration. Frequent, transparent communications about decision making will help build trust between employees at all levels of the organization. The BOLT should work with management to implement communication practices (see Recommendation #10). Transparency begets accountability and employees are more likely to be flexible and collaborative if they understand the context for decisions and are brought into the decision-making process at appropriate times. In turn, staff should also understand that their perspective is often more limited to their particular scope of work, and the decision that is ultimately made by management reflects the best interests of the entire Library. Trust on both sides of the employees' relationship will improve the utilization, efficiency, and effectiveness of Library operations. It is imperative that communications include the opportunity to discuss not only the business case for changes, but also provide a venue for employees to air emotions associated with changes.

- Invest in employee engagement and development: Engaged employees feel connected and committed to their workplace, contributing to higher productivity and enhanced customer satisfaction. To develop employee engagement in the Library, leadership should consider investing in various employee team-building activities and opportunities to collaborate on special projects that serve the community and advance the Library's mission. Examples of these activities could be employee book clubs, community service days, and off-site team building activities. Additionally, leadership should consider investing in additional employee development opportunities, such as tailored trainings and career planning (see Recommendation #13 and Recommendation #14).

Cultural transformation requires commitment and consistency, particularly among the BOLT and management. Establishing trust between staff and management can only be successful with stability in the Director position and will likely take several years to fully achieve. Most importantly, all library employees must be willing to let go of past conflicts and agree to move forward in creating and accepting a work environment that values the diverse experiences, perspectives, and expertise of its workforce to best serve Library patrons. Cultural transformation cannot take place without cooperation across all staff levels.

BYLAWS DEVELOPMENT

5	OBSERVATION	The BOLT has operated without bylaws since its inception, instead relying on the City of Berkeley's Commissioners' Manual, which provides inadequate governance guidance.
	RECOMMENDATION	Establish bylaws that are consistent with State law, City policy, BOLT needs, and best practices.

Like all publicly appointed and elected governing entities, library boards should operate in accordance with defined bylaws that establish framework and operations. Typically, bylaws should include information related to:

- Name and location of organization
- Organization purpose
- Election, roles, responsibilities, and terms of board members and officers
- Role and responsibilities of the Director
- Annual Board self-assessment (Recommendation #6)
- Removal or replacement of trustees
- Basic meeting guidelines (frequency, quorum, process for setting agenda, purpose of special meetings, expectations of public comment and union speaking time)
- Board structure (size, committees, if any)
- Compensation and indemnification of board members
- Provision to refer to Robert's Rules of Order for procedural matters
- Amendment of bylaws

- Dissolution of the organization

In 2018, the BOLT embarked on an initiative to develop its own bylaws. As the BOLT continues developing draft bylaws, the following guidelines and best practices should be taken into account:

- Alignment with Commissioners' Manual: The Berkeley's Commissioners' Manual sets precedent for much of the content that would be present in bylaws, including setting standards for meeting quorums, voting, and appointments. The Library bylaws should reflect and, if necessary, clarify these guidelines.

- Brevity: Bylaws should be concise and should not include any elements about BOLT's organization or structure that are likely to change on a regular basis. Overly prescriptive bylaws can ultimately restrict board operations and require significant additional work to properly maintain. Details regarding how the board does its work should be included in the operating policies (see below).

- Reference to operating policies: The bylaws should reference stand-alone confidentiality and conflict-of-interest policies. The confidentiality policy should clarify expectations for BOLT members' treatment of information and include a definition of confidential matters. Both policies should be reviewed and signed on an annual basis.

- Committees: The bylaws should include a clause granting the BOLT the ability to form committees and task forces as the need arises rather than naming and describing all committees.

- Support from Berkeley's City Attorney: Since bylaws are a legal document, the City Attorney should be involved in the development process. Once drafted, the City Attorney should review the bylaws to ensure they meet state and local legal requirements.

- Focus on Community Voices: During the comment section of public Board meetings, emphasis should be placed on hearing community voices. Shifting the agenda so public comment is heard prior to Labor comments could reinforce this approach and reflect the Library's patron-centered priorities.

- Term Limits: The bylaws should specify term limits. The most common board member term structure is two consecutive three-year terms. Best practice suggests staggering terms to ensure a certain number of new members join each year, while preventing no more than half of the terms to expire at the same time. For board chairs, the most common structure is two consecutive one-year terms.

In general, bylaws should provide a framework for BOLT operations without dictating policies and procedures. Appendix D provides sample board bylaws.

As a complement to adopted bylaws, the BOLT should also develop operating policies that provide additional detail regarding how the board operates. Policies can address BOLT member expectations, code of conduct, communications between the BOLT and staff, meeting and agenda processes, media communications, executive evaluation processes, board self-assessment processes, and regular review of operating procedures. Appendix B provides samples of board and director roles, responsibilities, and operating policies.

6	OBSERVATION	BOLT members were provided inconsistent levels of onboarding, resulting in opportunities for enhanced board governance and better understanding of Library operations.
	RECOMMENDATION	Establish consistent Board onboarding, education, and evaluation to ensure new members are properly prepared to serve in an oversight role and continuously improve governance.

Typically, when new board members are appointed, organizations perform standardized onboarding to ensure members understand its history, context, external relationships, direction, and key operational matters. However, due to turnover in the Director position, BOLT members reported inconsistent onboarding to their positions. All of the members currently serving on the BOLT are in their first term and were appointed in 2017 and 2018, a time of significant change and turbulence at the Library. Because members bring a wide range of experiences, knowledge, and capacities to their roles, improving the consistency of the onboarding process will help ensure BOLT members are all properly equipped to fulfill their role.

New BOLT member onboarding should include:

- Library vision, mission, and goals
- BOLT bylaws and operating policies
- Roles and responsibilities of BOLT, the Director, and staff
- Description of the communication processes between the Director and the BOLT
- Description of Library programs and services
- Strategic and operating planning documents
- Financial documents including budgets, recent audited financial statements, and monthly financials
- Library operational information including policy manuals, organization chart, and a history of the Library
- Calendar of BOLT and Library-related community activities
- Names and addresses of BOLT members
- A fundraising one pager
- BOLT meeting minutes from the last three meetings
- A tour of the Library facilities with an emphasis on understanding staff roles
- In-person introduction to leaders of any key stakeholder organizations

Onboarding materials should be thorough, although not prohibitively lengthy or detailed. In addition to providing these materials to new BOLT members, the Director should also deliver an orientation to review high-priority items, conduct site visits, and introduce new members to Library employees. Appendix E presents sample detailed board onboarding content.

The BOLT should also establish an annual self-assessment to help improve and expand governance capacity. Assessments should be designed to solicit members' reflections on their board participation experience, the effectiveness of meetings and decision-making processes, tolerance for diverse perspectives and opinions, and clarity of expectations. Similar to the Director evaluation process, Boards often establish desired outcomes to monitor themselves against. Collectively, these assessments can help identify potential obstacles and inform changes to continually improve the BOLT's efficacy. The results of the self-evaluation should be prepared in written form and discussed among the BOLT members, with any decisions or action items summarized in BOLT minutes. Appendix F provides self-assessment samples that can assist the BOLT in developing a tool that reflects their priorities and fits their needs.

DIRECTOR RECRUITMENT

7	OBSERVATION	The Library has experienced frequent Director turnover, potentially complicating the upcoming Director recruitment process.
	RECOMMENDATION	Conduct and facilitate the Director recruitment process using a third party, incorporating input from management and staff as appropriate, and develop a Director onboarding plan.

Since October 2014, the Library has employed three Directors, one Interim Director, and two Acting Directors. Turnover in the Director position did not occur quietly in the Berkeley community or the national library community. Due to the circumstances surrounding the termination of several recent directors, qualified candidates may be deterred from applying. To encourage candidates to apply, the BOLT should publicly emphasize its support of the individual filling the role.

Library leadership, management, and staff interviewed as part of this assessment also identified several themes that they believe would contribute to a new Director's long-term success. Specific traits included:

- Effective collaboration and communication
- Ability to balance urgency for positive change with patience to move deliberately
- Capacity to navigate political environments
- A community-centered approach that recognizes the unique environment of Berkeley
- Strong commitment to the Library

Additional information about these themes is included in Appendix G.

As the BOLT defines the Director's roles, responsibilities, and expectations, they should consider soliciting additional input from Library employees related to the Director's characteristics, leadership, and communication style. Given the historical instability of the Library's leadership team, the BOLT should engage a recruiting firm to conduct the search for the next Director to help ensure a good organizational and cultural fit. Successful search processes typically involve five stages once an initial pool of candidates is identified and screened by phone.

- First Interviews: The search committee (which may include the recruiting firm only, or a combination of the recruiting firm and BOLT members) interviews five to eight potential candidates, with the goal of choosing the top two or three candidates.
- Reference Checks: Reference and background checks are completed for the top candidates. Starting the reference process at this point helps the search committee identify any serious issues and clarify outstanding questions. In addition, if concerns arise, the candidates have an opportunity to provide further context that may be useful for the search committee's deliberations.

- Second Interviews: The full BOLT interviews the top two or three candidates.

- Meet and Greet: The top finalists are invited to a meet and greet with management and staff members and partner organizations, such as the Friends of the Library and the Library Foundation. This meeting is not an interview, but rather an opportunity for the candidate to talk with employees and stakeholders, for the organization to promote itself, and for staff to be involved in sharing feedback.

- Final Decision: The final hiring decision should be made by a majority vote of the BOLT. If the top choice candidate is not ultimately available, it would be preferable for the BOLT to fully restart the search rather than performing an abbreviated recruitment process.

In order to protect the privacy of potential candidates, BOLT members should be mindful of the confidentiality agreement signed as part of the board bylaws (Recommendation #5) and establish shared expectations that details of the recruitment process will be kept confidential until the meet and greet phase. In addition, at the reference check phase, it is important to obtain written consent from candidates to allow references to be contacted.

In preparation for the new Director, the BOLT should outline a leadership onboarding plan. The plan should address the need for the new Director to develop an understanding of the organizational culture, be patient in building credibility, and focus on creating relationships with staff and community stakeholders. In addition, it should address the standards and goals that the Director will be assessed on during their first annual performance evaluation (Recommendation #1).

CHANGE MANAGEMENT

8	OBSERVATION	The Library struggles to sustain changes effectively and engage staff to adopt new systems, processes, and programs. In the past, change management has been perceived as top-down and ineffective despite efforts to engage staff.
	RECOMMENDATION	Create a culture of deliberate change management to ensure new programs and initiatives are effectively developed, communicated, implemented, and adopted.

Library employees at all levels report challenges in effectively managing, encouraging, and adopting change within the organization. Resistance to change is attributed to several inter-related factors including organizational culture, prior change management which has been perceived by some staff as top-down and ineffective, and persistent leadership turnover that has contributed to an atmosphere of uncertainty and distrust. In addition, employees have not been consistently held accountable to adopt new change, creating a culture that tolerates obstructive and combative behavior.

Change is continuous and inevitable, particularly as libraries nationwide are adjusting to fit the modern age of technology and information. Without staff buy-in, commitment, mitigated resistance, elimination of fear, and consistent adoption across the organization, the Library will not realize the full benefit of changes designed to help the organization better serve the Berkeley community.

To improve implementation, adoption, and buy-in, the Library should establish a change management process for organizational changes. Wherever possible, employees should be engaged prior to announcing new changes to provide input on potential concerns and provide suggestions to improve implementation. Management should actively seek this input, listen to staff concerns, and respond appropriately. Often, employees facing change experience fear; therefore, a robust change management approach should emphasize the human side of change to promote employee adoption. By acknowledging their feelings and concerns, management demonstrates its support of employees, which improves overall change management.

The following are key elements for implementing successful change management. Sample change management templates are provided in Appendix H.

- Actively align Library leadership: After the decision to make a change—whether it occurs primarily at an enterprise, strategic, or tactical level—has been made, the BOLT's primary responsibility is to ensure there is alignment between Library leadership and management. These two groups need to share a unified, consistent message with staff and community stakeholders. Once the change has been announced, the BOLT should demonstrate support of the change and assist the transition. This mutual commitment between BOLT and management is essential to ensuring a successful transition efficiently and effectively. Without alignment and commitment, any change management initiative is likely to fail.

- Communicate the need for change: Excellent communication is critical to change management. Affected employees should be aware of the organizational need for change and potential solutions. Library management, with support from the BOLT, should build awareness around the organization's needs and the risk in remaining with the status quo. Where appropriate, impacted stakeholders, which can include staff and patrons, should be involved in defining initiative requirements and the design process. Project sponsors should ensure that clear and open lines of communication are maintained throughout the change management process and advocate for two-way dialogue to provide answers and reassure stakeholders.

- Plan for and understand the ramifications of the change: Clearly identify what is changing, how it is changing, who will be affected, how stakeholders will be affected, and when the change will occur. Change should occur in a multi-step, well-communicated process that includes ample training and no surprises to staff. Key communication messages should be developed and disseminated to ensure staff are aware of progress towards implementation and are reminded of benefits they can expect to derive from the new system or process.

- Consider and design a method for staff education: Throughout implementation, build staff knowledge and abilities through training and education opportunities. Following implementation, provide reinforcement and allow employees to provide feedback on the change and change process, making minor adjustments where necessary. Ensure consolidation by providing policies, procedures, and performance measures that reflect the change and can serve as staff resources.

A.   TIER 2: STRATEGIC

Strategic observations and recommendations are common improvement areas across all or most functions within the Library. These recommendations pertain to Library management, including the Director, Deputy Director, managers, and supervisors.

COMMUNICATION

9	OBSERVATION	Some employees report dissatisfaction with historical communication practices, contributing to distrust between staff and management.
	RECOMMENDATION	Establish formal communication protocols that encourage productive and frequent two-way communication between management and staff.

Concerns regarding communication and trust between staff and management were prevalent in interviews and the all-staff survey. Nearly half (43%) of survey respondents reported dissatisfaction with communication from Library management. Approximately the same percentage (46%) of respondents also reported dissatisfaction with Library management in general. Without transparent, productive communication between staff and management, the Library cannot effectively operate or focus on community services and programming.

Library management should establish formal communication practices to ensure that employees across the organization receive consistent, frequent, and transparent communication to remain informed. When communication successfully cascades from Library leadership, to management, to front-line staff, it drives clarity and alignment around the Library's direction and goals. Whenever decisions that impact Library staff and management are made, management should ensure they have a consistent understanding and message to share with employees. The cascading effect requires managers and supervisors at every level of the organization to translate the information in a way that is relevant to their specific team and consistently address potential concerns over issues and changes. When communication patterns are clear and documented, it can remove any question of whether or not information has been shared, freeing up staff and management to deal with more mission-critical community-oriented work and ensuring that all employees receive the same information.

Additionally, communication practices should be designed to send information up through the organization to promote two-way communication that includes front-line staff. Management should relay messages in a timely manner and provide employees an opportunity to ask questions, raise concerns, and provide critical feedback. Front-line supervisors and managers play a critical role in both sharing information from management and serving as the conduit for feedback from staff. Without their leadership, the two-directional flow of information is blocked, creating frustration for both staff and management. As such, staff, supervisors, and managers should all be trained on the communication practices so they can effectively participate.

More consistent use of the Library Council as a means to sharing information may also be key for the communication process. Some staff report that the Library Council has become a useful source of information, which is a positive sign that this model can be effective. However, not all employees receive information from this group in a regular manner. To continue strengthening the potential impact of the Library Council, supervisors and managers should have clearly outlined expectations about how and when to share information with their staff.

Face-to-face communication should be the primary method of communication, both so that staff can learn important information in a personal way, and so management can listen to any issues brought directly from staff. However, in-person communication should be subsequently documented via a staff newsletter or team email so it can be easily accessible to all employees and provide a shared point of reference.

DECISION MAKING

10	OBSERVATION	Some staff report a lack of understanding about how, where, or when decisions are made and felt that decisions impacting their work are often made in a unilateral and hierarchical manner.
	RECOMMENDATION	Develop a decision-making framework that aligns with the operating plan to provide additional transparency in the Library's decision-making processes.

Decision-making processes, authority, and involvement are often ambiguous in organizations with leadership instability, lack of trust, and low morale. In the all-staff survey, 45% of respondents reported that they lacked the authority needed to effectively perform their job. While this may also be addressed by clearly defining roles and responsibilities, it also suggests that decision-making processes could potentially be improved and more transparent.

Employees report differing levels of involvement in decision-making. Some employees report a lack of understanding about how, where, or when decisions are made. From their perspective, decisions that impact their work have historically been made in a unilateral, top-down, and inconsistent manner. In contrast to this, some employees report high levels of staff involvement in decision-making processes. Based on the differences between staff perspectives, lack of clarity around decision-making is likely a byproduct of resistance to change or inadequate change management.

To enable consistent and clear decision-making, the Library should create a simple decision-making framework that clearly defines the Library's priorities and how decisions advance these priorities. This tool would define criteria and provide a consistent process by which organization-wide decisions should be analyzed. It should be broad, adaptable, and flexible enough to be responsive to almost any situation or unit in the Library. The framework should be implemented in conjunction with the change management steps (see Recommendation #9), the operating plan (Recommendation #2), and should inform program evaluation (Recommendation #19).

A decision-making framework may include both evaluative criteria and logistical questions to make the process as effective and efficient as possible. For example:

Decision Criteria

- Does this decision meaningfully improve service to patrons and the community?

Decision Logistics

- What are we deciding about?
- Who are the decision makers? Who has authority to make this decision?

- Does this decision support the City of Berkeley and Library missions and operating plan?
- Does this decision align with City of Berkeley core values?
- Does this decision have budget implications? If so, is it financially feasible?
- Does this decision increase equity in our community?

- Who will be impacted by this decision?
- Who needs to provide in-put on this decision?
- Who needs to be informed about this decision?
- By when do we need to make this decision?

It may be helpful to use an established matrix to more explicitly clarify decision-making roles. There are several common matrices used in organizations, usually denoted by an acronym that represents the roles individuals hold during the decision-making process, such as RACI:

- Responsible: Who is responsible for carrying out the decision once it has been made?
- Accountable: Who has the authority to make this decision? If it is more than one person, how will the decision be made (majority vote, consensus, etc.)?
- Consulted: Who has important information to inform this decision?
- Informed: Whose work will be impacted by this decision? Who needs to be kept in the loop?

When routinely applied, a decision-making framework and clearly defined roles help maintain alignment with the Library's unifying goals, ensure that decisions are made in a consistent manner, and promote employee understanding of decisions.

MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT

11	OBSERVATION	There are opportunities to further develop managers and supervisors to better engage employees and establish a culture of accountability.
	RECOMMENDATION	Provide ongoing mentorship, training, and institutional support to enable managers and supervisors to consistently apply Library policies and set performance expectations.

In the all-staff survey, most respondents (74%) reported that supervisors were responsive to their needs and provided satisfactory two-way communication. Additionally, 69% of respondents reported satisfaction with their supervisor and 65% reported satisfaction with their supervisors' management abilities. A smaller percentage of respondents (59%) reported that Library employees are held accountable for providing excellent service to the community. The difference in these responses as well as evidence gathered through interviews, suggests that there are opportunities to further develop managerial support and measures to ensure consistent application of Library policies.

Managers and front-line supervisors are essential to the success of the Library. Research has shown a strong positive correlation between effective leadership behavior and the capacity for change in organizations.[1] More specifically, front-line supervisors make a considerable contribution to achieving the Library's mission by supporting the employees they supervise, which is closely linked to employee engagement, team performance, and service delivery.[2] Front-line supervisors are responsible for managing the majority of the Library's employees, therefore their perspectives and alignment with management greatly influences the overall culture. When managers and supervisors are aligned and positively engaged, the effects are felt throughout the Library.

Historically, Library managers and front-line supervisors would have benefitted from additional tools, incentives, and institutional support to effectively manage employees across units and branches. Although some Library managers actively coach front-line supervisors, lack of consistency and accountability measures results in mixed success of these efforts. For example, some supervisors refrained from taking action to correct staff behavior or relay messages from Library management accurately and timely, which may have contributed to challenging change management and organizational communication. For the Library to deliver on its mission, managers and supervisors need to be willing and able to supervise employees fairly and effectively, with support from Library leadership.

The Library should focus on clarifying the authority and responsibilities of the front-line supervisor position, and provide additional training and support so they can successfully embrace their role. Depending on specific personnel needs, facilitated trainings may focus on sharing feedback, communication, building teams, navigating difficult situations and conversations, resolving conflicts, and implementing progressive discipline. Skills-based trainings with supervisors, management, and union stewards related to collaboration and joint conflict management could also be helpful to more effectively address issues that arise. In addition, supervisors should be supported through clearly defined expectations around their role, proper authority to carry out their duties, mentorship from management, and accountability metrics as a component of their annual performance review.

The Library should also ensure that managers are receiving encouragement and guidance from leadership on the best ways to support their front-line supervisors. This could take many forms, including training, formal or informal mentorship, and support from leadership and HR when implementing accountability measures. Because of the key role that middle managers play in the organization's culture, it is imperative that they are properly equipped to create respectful and trusting relationships with employees while upholding expectations.

PERFORMANCE EVALUATIONS

12	OBSERVATION	Performance evaluations are inconsistent, cumbersome, and could be better leveraged to develop Library employees.
	RECOMMENDATION	Ensure performance evaluations are beneficial for both the Library and employees by integrating the review process with a growth and development plan, setting annual goals, and streamlining the evaluation process.

The Library's employee performance review process is led by individual supervisors on a hire-date anniversary schedule, monitored manually, and uses a pre-determined evaluation form from the City of Berkeley. However, the process is not consistently followed and managers have received limited training on how to effectively utilize performance evaluations to support employee accountability and development. In the all-staff survey, 63% of employees reported satisfaction with the feedback received by their supervisors and about half (49%) said the feedback they've received on their performance is extremely useful or very useful. In addition, performance evaluations are completed on paper forms, rather than through a secure online system. As such, tracking is difficult, cumbersome, and potentially not confidential, increasing the chances that performance evaluations will not occur on regular intervals to develop and coach staff.

Additionally, performance evaluations are not tied to an employee growth and development plan that would direct beneficial trainings and other leadership opportunities while also aligning with the Library's mission and goals. In the all-staff survey, most respondents (74%) reported that their opportunities for advancement are not well defined and about a quarter (24%) of respondents expressed dissatisfaction with access to trainings that would further develop their career. Therefore, performance evaluations could be more beneficial to employees and administration. In small organizations, career development often includes growth into new roles, responsibilities, and activities within the department rather than traditional promotions and inclusion on the management team.

To increase the effectiveness of the performance evaluation process, the Library should consider the following:

- Consider shifting from the anniversary date approach to an organization-wide approach where set review dates are used for all employees throughout the organization. This change could improve the ease of administration and reporting, help ensure evaluations are completed, provide more consistency for employees, and make it easier to adopt any changes to the process in the future.
- Incorporate HR monitoring of performance evaluations to ensure they are taking place on an annual basis.
- Develop a competency framework for each job classification that includes soft skills required for success in that role.
- Integrate performance review processes with employee growth and development plans.
- Incorporate metrics that support cultural transformation into performance evaluations such as customer service, communication, teamwork, etc.

- Provide any necessary training for supervisors and managers to deliver effective and useful performance appraisals (Recommendation #12).

- Streamline the performance evaluation process and documentation by implementing an automated employee performance management system.

- Revisit, update, and clarify all employee job descriptions to reflect actual duties and expectations. Up-to-date job descriptions can contribute to clear understanding of each employee's role and responsibilities—increasing alignment and accountability for performing essential job functions.

Performance evaluations provide management and staff the opportunity to reflect on areas of strength and opportunities for further development. Through this process, employees receive recognition for their achievements and managers have an opportunity to demonstrate support for their continued growth and development, helping transition organizational culture by holding all employees accountable.

PROGRESSIVE DISCIPLINARY PROCESS

13	OBSERVATION	The progressive disciplinary process could be better leveraged to hold staff accountable to City of Berkeley and Library policies and standards of conduct.
	RECOMMENDATION	Provide staff with training on the progressive disciplinary process and support standard and consistent utilization by front-line supervisors and management.

Effective progressive disciplinary programs significantly contribute to creating a work environment that promotes employee morale.[3] Progressive discipline can provide structure, transparency, and clarity while also being oriented toward due process and growth with a focus on coaching employees to improve performance. Additionally, without a comprehensive personnel manual, progressive discipline for unwarranted or inappropriate behavior cannot be enforced.

While the Library has a detailed progressive discipline policy in place, staff report that some supervisors appropriately utilize this process, while others do not issue progressive discipline. This enables certain employees to operate with some degree of impunity, which compromises trust and results in lowered employee morale throughout the organization.

To improve the effectiveness and fairness of the progressive disciplinary process, the Library should consider the following:

- Provide ongoing training on the progressive discipline process for staff, supervisors, and managers (Recommendation #12).

- Ensure supervisors and managers have support from Library leadership and management. For example, supervisors and managers should be able to rely on Library leadership to communicate the expectation that staff fully utilize internal due processes for reporting issues and grievances, including defined turnaround times, before bringing issues to the BOLT or individual BOLT members.

- Use job descriptions and performance evaluations to hold employees accountable.

Applying performance evaluations and progressive discipline simultaneously and uniformly across the Library can help facilitate cultural transformation and improve employee morale. Employees are provided opportunities to change their behavior and teams can operate more productively and collaboratively by knowing that poor behaviors will be addressed.

EXIT INTERVIEWS

14	OBSERVATION	Exit interviews are not always completed or analyzed to improve employee retention, particularly at the management level.
	RECOMMENDATION	Implement consistent exit interview procedures and conduct a semi-annual analysis to evaluate factors contributing to employee turnover and retention.

Exit interviews are an opportunity to hear directly from outgoing employees and gain valuable insights into employee issues. Currently, exit interviews are not always completed by outgoing Library employees. Furthermore, when interviews are conducted, the results are not consistently documented or analyzed.

The exit interview process should be scoped and managed by the HR function, either at the Library or City of Berkeley offices, in consultation with Library management. To provide the most neutral setting and solicit honest feedback, a Library or City HR representative should lead the interviews. HR should be thoughtful about gathering and storing data; summaries of responses should be included with employee personnel file and aggregated for larger analysis.

Exit interviews should offer a combination of standard questions that all departing employees answer in addition to some open-ended questions. This allows the Library to gather parallel data and track trends while also providing the opportunity to solicit unexpected responses. In terms of content, the exit interviews should provide insight into employee motivations, issues within the organization, and information about competing organizations. The Harvard Business Review suggests that organizations should focus on five primary content goals when creating an exit interview strategy:[4]

- Uncover issues related to HR: Questions relating to salary and benefits needs, development opportunities, or other HR practices that may influence an employee's decision to stay or leave.
- Understand employees' perception of their work: Questions relating to the job itself, organizational culture, and employee relationships.
- Gain insight into managers' leadership styles and effectiveness: Questions relating to an employee's relationship with and experience of their direct manager.
- Learn about HR benchmarks (salary, benefits) at competing organizations: Questions relating to the salary and benefits of the employee's new position.
- Foster innovation by soliciting ideas for improving the organization: Questions relating to opportunities to increase the impact of the organization.

[4] Making Exit Interviews Count. https://hbr.org/2016/04/making-exit-interviews-count

Exit interviews are most useful when the data generated is aggregated and used to inform organizational decisions. The data should be analyzed by HR for common themes or issues to help the Library continuously improve. Results should be anonymized, consolidated, and shared with Library management on a semi-annual basis to identify common themes or issues and determine if any follow-up actions are necessary. While HR may administer the day-to-day operations, management and leadership should be active partners in using and responding to the results.

HR RESOURCES

15	OBSERVATION	The Library's HR function is reliant on manual processes and lacks sufficient staff resources to fulfill operational demands.
	RECOMMENDATION	Increase Library HR staffing levels to support cultural transformation initiatives, modernize processes, and perform other vital HR functions.

The Library currently employs one in-house full time HR Analyst who supports many aspects of employee engagement, labor relations, retention, and recruitment. The City of Berkeley HR Department provides centralized guidance and advice to departmental liaisons. Currently, HR processes, systems, and documentation are decentralized and heavily reliant on hard copy documents. For example, time keeping and requests for time off are both tracked on carbon copy forms. The workload associated with managing these paper records and the intensive HR requirements of the Library cannot be adequately addressed with current staffing levels.

High workloads in an HR function tend to perpetuate a reactive culture, with limited time for planning, prioritization, coaching, and proactive strategy development. Therefore, HR is limited to reacting to the highest-priority personnel matters, recruitment, and managing compliance with regulations.

HR plays an integral role in implementing many of the Tier 2 and Tier 3 recommendations, such as implementing consistent performance evaluations and developing a personnel manual. In addition to this influx of work, the City of Berkeley is also modernizing its finance and human resource systems to automate functions such as payroll, time and attendance, employee records, and employee performance management. This initiative will likely require time and effort on the part of the Library's HR function to properly implement and train users. The financial system component is slated for implementation in October 2018 and implementation of the timekeeping system component is expected to occur January 2018.

Because of the significant impact of technological and cultural transformation on the Library's HR function, the Library should consider adding a full-time HR Analyst position. This employee could augment the existing analyst's workload in:

- Employee recruitment
- Job description updates
- Employee performance management
- Succession planning and knowledge transfer
- Coordination of cross-functional committees between Library staff

- New employee onboarding and orientation
- Process improvement
- Benefits and leave monitoring
- Classification and compensation studies
- Personnel manual development

INNOVATION AND RISK

16	OBSERVATION	The Library has encountered some staff resistance to moving from a risk-averse and inward-facing culture toward one of innovation.
	RECOMMENDATION	Promote a culture of innovation by engaging the community, developing an innovation evaluation framework, and exploring peer exchange opportunities.

Libraries fill a critical role in addressing information challenges and creating opportunities for communities to engage with information, ideas, and each other. As the digital age transforms the information landscape, libraries must be constantly seeking ways to provide information to residents in ways that are equitable, accessible, and relevant to community needs.

The Library needs to prioritize continuous innovation to meet the shifting needs of the dynamic Berkeley community. The Library should continually encourage employees to embrace new ideas and regularly communicate the benefits of innovation.

Currently, staff report that attempts to take risks are often hindered by bureaucratic decision-making processes, some of which may be tied to industry culture. The Library Leadership & Management journal[5] notes that "due to the nature of the work, libraries have for decades demanded perfection and order in all aspects of library work. Therefore, embedded in the fabric of the industry is a resistance to error, failure, and change. Changing this mindset is necessary in order for a library to be innovative, creative, and comfortable with taking risks."

Despite these challenges, the Library successfully introduced some innovations in recent years, such as the elimination of overdue fees. Some strides have also been made to develop programs based on a more forward-looking, participatory model—such as FixIt Clinics, Library on Wheels, and the Cornerstone Initiative to integrate STEM learning into programming, among others. To continue to build the Library's reputation for providing cutting-edge services, the Library should take steps to more deliberately foster a culture of innovation. The Journal of Library Innovation,[6] offers the following framework for how libraries can think about what constitutes an innovative practice:

- Discover unmet user needs through community and patron engagement (Recommendation #23)

- Introduce new services or retool traditional services to improve the patron experience.

- Collaborate between libraries and other types of institutions, resulting in demonstrable improvements in service to users.

- Implement new technologies to improve and extend library services to meet user needs.

- Explore the future of libraries.

- Pilot test unconventional ideas and services.

- Redefine the roles of library employees to better serve patrons.

- Develop processes that encourage organizational innovation.

- Reach out to and engaging library users and non-users in new or creative ways.

- Find new ways to make library collections or library facilities more useful to users.

Given the unique needs of the Berkeley community, three of the above practices to increase innovation and encourage risk-taking seem particularly well-suited: focusing on community engagement, establishing an innovation fund, and creating exchange opportunities with peer libraries and institutions.

Focusing on Community Engagement

Recommendation #23 describes community engagement practices.

Ensuring Effective Use of Innovation Funding

Currently, the Berkeley Public Library Foundation financially supports efforts to innovate and improve services. Recent staff-driven initiatives funded by the Foundation include the implementation of a laptop lending operation, the establishment of a dynamic new space (The Commons) at the Central Library, and the incorporation of interactive Prowise screens as a program tool at three of the Library's facilities. Although this model works relatively well, increasing transparency about how proposals are evaluated would be useful. For example, the following elements should be considered when evaluating possible innovative programs and services:

- Timeframe: Projects should take place over a set period of time (up to a year).

- Patron Needs: The primary evaluative criteria should be placed on supporting patron needs. The value of experimentation is intrinsically tied to serving the Berkeley community, i.e., for something to be innovative, it must be useful and add value.

- Alignment with operating plan: The program should support the Library's mission and goals established in its operating plan.

- Evaluative metrics: Define how the programs' success and opportunities for improvement will be measured and evaluated.

At the end of the pilot period, the Library should hold a review session that incorporates space to celebrate both successes and failures. Tracking, documentation, and oversight should be sufficiently robust to evaluate outcomes while not overburdening the innovation process in order to maintain an emphasis on moving fast, failing often, and being open to new ideas.

Creating Peer Exchange Opportunities

The Library should also consider facilitating conversations between staff at various peer libraries and institutions to discuss ideas and potentially learn about opportunities to better engage Berkeley residents. This could take a variety of forms, ranging from informal (e.g., an online discussion panel for staff from multiple institutions), to more structured (e.g., a formal peer exchange program) practices.

At all levels of the organization, individuals report frustration with the idea of looking to "best practices" or adopting ideas from libraries that are dissimilar to the Library. As such, it is important to note that useful innovations can be found in libraries of all types, even if they would need to be tailored to each specific local community. While some peer libraries and institutions should be similarly positioned to Berkeley in terms of funding and community characteristics, exchange efforts should not be limited to institutions that closely mirror the Library.

By taking deliberate measures to encourage innovation, the Library can shift toward creating an environment where all employees participate in generating, discussing, evaluating and implementing valuable new ideas or alternative thinking that benefit patron service.

B.   TIER 3: TACTICAL

Tactical observations and recommendations apply to specific, day-to-day issues within one or more service areas. These recommendations are directed at specific members of Library management and program staff.

PROCEDURE DOCUMENTATION

17	OBSERVATION	Many Library procedures are not current, resulting in potential inconsistent expectations and service delivery.
	RECOMMENDATION	Document key procedures to provide consistency to employees and patrons.

As noted previously, the Library has experienced high turnover at the leadership and management levels. The loss of institutional knowledge associated with these departures, combined with a lack of documented procedures, has resulted in reduced efficiency and effectiveness. A lack of documentation to guide operations can also contribute to communication challenges due to lack of defined service standards and difficulty in managing customer service expectations. In situations where procedures are documented, there is not sufficient communication, oversight, or training regarding these procedures to ensure consistent application across units and branches.

The Library should create a cross-functional procedure development team to inventory current Library procedures, determine what additional procedures need to be created, and establish a prioritized schedule for developing and updating policies. This team should also ensure that any Library procedures are consistent with City of Berkeley policies. Given the current environment at the Library, priority focus should be given to the development of an employee handbook to outline expectations for staff.

Once procedures are updated, they should be available in a centralized location, such as an intranet, for employees to easily reference. As policies and procedures often live in many dispersed places, the procedure team will need to get creative in order to develop an organized, easy-to-navigate repository. Additionally, the Library should develop an ongoing governance structure with Library-wide procedures requiring the approval of the Director or Deputy Director, as well as regular reviews by process owners.

While procedures are critical to consistency and effectiveness, the Library should also provide training and hold personnel accountable for implementing them. Due to the historical lack of training and the insufficiency of current guidelines, there is elevated need for training and expectation-setting for the adoption of guidelines. The Library should also consider how procedures are communicated during new employee onboarding (Recommendation #20). As procedures evolve over time, training should be revised and redelivered to ensure consistency across functions and locations.

Well-developed and properly applied procedures will help increase employee accountability, smooth employee transitions, and ultimately improve the Library's ability to serve patrons. At their best, consistently applied procedures convert random work efforts of many individuals into collective, focused results.

PROGRAM EVALUATION

18	OBSERVATION	The Library lacks a consistent method to evaluate programs and ensure they adequately address community needs and priorities.
	RECOMMENDATION	Establish a consistent program evaluation process and reporting system to ensure programs are advancing the Library's mission, respond to community needs, and are delivered equitably.

Program evaluation processes provide staff with the information and tools needed to share and demonstrate the value that programs and services provide to the community. They also ensure that Library programs are relevant and responsive to evolving, diverse community needs. Furthermore, evaluations promote a shared understanding of a program's purpose and goals for all stakeholders.

The Library's current program evaluation process is informal and primarily relies on ad hoc community feedback and Library staff judgement to determine a program's success. While librarians' perspectives on programming and patron experience is valuable, it should also be augmented by a robust data-driven program evaluation framework to better communicate programmatic successes and opportunities for improvement. In the last year, the Library began tracking basic program information including the number of attendees, cost per attendee, and responsible staff member. These measures could be strengthened by adding total allocated staff resources, demographic information about the target audience, and subsequent engagement with the Library. Systematic customer engagement feedback (Recommendation #23) could also be included. This information should be tracked in a unified system to ensure that work is not fragmented or siloed.

To support continuous program improvement, the Library should adopt a formal program evaluation process that combines anecdotal and qualitative evidence with data and other quantitative evidence. Program evaluation activities should integrate into the regular workflow for all programs and services by developing an evaluation framework that includes:

- Program Logic Models: The Library is currently training staff on the use of logic models. They should continue this work to develop program logic models to clarify goals, resources, activities, outputs, and outcomes.

- Evaluation Measures: Identify and collect relevant output and outcome indicators for each program.

- Related Processes: Develop processes to support the evaluative work, including how data will be collected, managed, analyzed, shared, and acted upon.

- Success Standards: Determine which standards should be adopted to assess program success. For example, does a program need to serve a minimum number of patrons? Does the program need to have a specific cost to participant ratio? Does the program need to actively reduce inequity? A weighted assessment framework that takes multiple dimensions into account may be the most appropriate solution. Appendix I provides sample assessment frameworks.

The integration of program evaluation processes should be thoughtfully initiated and aligned with the operational planning process. Training may also be required to develop manager and staff skills on program evaluation, logic models, and evaluative methods; which may be best facilitated by an outside organization. Throughout the development process, staff should remember that program evaluation processes should be as lean as possible and not generate arduous additional workload for staff, who should be involved in creating the evaluation framework.

EMPLOYEE ONBOARDING

19	OBSERVATION	Employee onboarding practices are fragmented and inconsistent, resulting in suboptimal institutional support for new employees.
	RECOMMENDATION	Create a systematic onboarding process to increase employee retention, productivity, and morale.

New employee onboarding is distinct from orientation, which is often a stand-alone event focused on completing required paperwork and receiving equipment. Instead, onboarding is the entire process by which an employee is introduced to a new job, workplace culture, and operational activities. It is a chance for the organization to make a positive first impression and is the first step toward employee retention.

Currently, new employee onboarding practices are fragmented and inconsistent. In the all-staff survey, only half of employees (53%) were satisfied with their onboarding experience, although many noted that they had been in their role for a significant period of time. Currently, new employees attend a City of Berkeley orientation and may receive some additional orientation at the Library. However, efforts to train and integrate new employees are otherwise left up to independent supervisors. Without consistent onboarding, the Library is missing a key opportunity to positively influence how employees adapt to their position and embrace organizational culture and values.

Many studies have shown that a well-designed orientation program can have huge benefits, including increased employee retention, productivity, morale, confidence, job satisfaction, and achievement for the organization.[7] Formalized onboarding can be even more impactful for new hires coming from diverse backgrounds, making it especially crucial for any organization focused on engaging a more diverse staff.[8]

The Library should create a systematic onboarding process for all new employees to prepare them for success in their role. This work should be led by HR with strong participation and support from Library supervisors, managers, and leadership. According to best practices, library onboarding programs include the following components[9]:

- Socialization: This should include clear communication prior to start date; explanation of position; training or shadowing; introduction to expectations and evaluation criteria; and discussion of the organizational history, culture, language, structure, mission, vision and values, politics, and people.

- Support programs: A "buddy" program pairs new hires with veteran employees for a specified period of time ranging between a few weeks to the first year of employment. Buddies can make new hires feel welcome, answer questions, and help the new employee fit in.

- Checklist: Information that is specific to the particular position and unit should be guided by supervisors and managers using a comprehensive checklist. The checklist helps ensure that supervisors and managers effectively and efficiently welcome new employees and cover all relevant policy and procedures.

- Review of policies: The checklist should include a review and discussion of relevant policies and guidelines.

- Safety: Employees should be given the resources they need to feel physically and emotionally safe.

- Communication processes: This may include both informal (email or meetings) and formal (reporting, intranet, newsletters) communication processes.

- Significant program length: Onboarding is a comprehensive process that is expected to last between one month to the entire first year.

- Unique activities identified by individual institutions: Each department is unique and may require additional focused onboarding activities.

Employee onboarding supports strong employee engagement, trust with peers and supervisors, open communication, and support in adapting to a new work environment. Overall, onboarding provides an opportunity to perpetuate cultural transformation. Appendix J includes a sample onboarding program structure, orientation agenda, and onboarding checklist.

SUCCESSION PLANNING

20	OBSERVATION	Many Library employees are eligible for retirement, which could impact operations and service delivery.
	RECOMMENDATION	Develop a strategy to address succession planning for key positions to ensure operational continuity and maintenance of relationships with stakeholders.

Nearly a third of (29.8%) current Library employees are age-eligible to retire. A significant number of employees leaving in a short period of time could have significant negative impacts on operations, especially in specialized disciplines.

The Library should develop a strategy and timeline for developing succession plans for key positions. This kind of initiative is typically led by HR, which prepares a template for succession plans, provides guidance and technical support, and reviews plans to ensure completeness and accountability. An effective succession planning process should contain the following elements:

- Process to identify essential positions and their critical competencies
- Method for identifying and filling gaps in succession (i.e., strengthen internal capabilities and/or recruit from the outside)
- Procedures to identify, promote, and select high-potential staff, along with plans for individual career development
- Procedures to monitor individual development through coaching, mentoring, and performance management
- Active leadership involvement
- Integration with the organization's operating plan
- Regular review of each essential position's plan to ensure its effectiveness

On an ongoing basis, the Library should analyze employee demographics to forecast potential retirements and prioritize the development of succession strategies for those positions most likely to be impacted by retirements. As the City of Berkeley's current Strategic Plan calls for increased development of succession planning capacity, the City HR team may be a good resource for this work.

SAFE AND INCLUSIVE SPACE

21	OBSERVATION	Similar to other urban libraries, the Library faces challenges in creating a safe and welcoming space for all patrons.
	RECOMMENDATION	Continue developing a safety program in accordance with best practices, including an employee safety committee, developing a comprehensive safety plan, and providing regular staff training.

Similar to other libraries in urban areas, the Berkeley Public Library is faced with the challenge of creating a welcoming space that is accessible and safe for all employees and patrons. Over the past three years, the Library's five locations have documented 581 incidents, which range from reports of graffiti to more significant human safety concerns. In response, a cross-departmental Safety Committee was established earlier this year and initial staff reports of their efforts are positive.

Moss Adams did not perform an assessment of current safety and security practices. However, we have included several best practices that the Library may consider to support safety and inclusiveness in its branches:

- Developing, documenting, and training employees on a comprehensive safety plan that includes a patron conduct policy, employee responsibilities, facility close-out procedures, and emergency/disaster procedures that address building evacuations, active shooter scenarios, and natural disasters, amongst others. Best practice suggests that regular trainings, emergency drills, and compliance checks are important aspects to ensuring that employees are prepared for unexpected situations.

- Offering regular expert-led safety trainings for front-line staff, supervisors, and managers.

- Ensuring front-line staff have access to an on-call manager who can provide back-up for staff facing complicated safety cases.

- Hiring additional staff to support patrons experiencing mental health issues. A growing number of public libraries across the country have hired social workers and/or implemented peer-to-peer counseling. These experts can train employees and offer front-line social service support to patrons that other Library employees are not equipped to provide. The San Francisco Public Library pioneered this approach and could potentially serve as a useful thought partner.

- Organizing an employee safety committee that makes recommendations for improvements by tracking and analyzing safety incidents, developing new guidelines, and managing annual trainings. Safety-related performance measurements should also be incorporated into organizational reporting to Library management and the BOLT. Regularly rotating employees on the committee can increase levels of awareness among staff and management.

- Developing or strengthening partnerships with local law enforcement and anti-violence organizations to provide safety education for both employees and patrons.

Friendly and consistent patron service also helps create a welcoming space. In 2017, the Library's Customer Service Planning Team, Library Council, and Library management developed the Berkley Public Library Customer Service Philosophy. Staff report that the philosophy has been useful to frame expectations around supporting patrons; however, it has not yet been consistently adopted by all employees. To build on the momentum from this work, the Library should implement the philosophy more consistently across all branches by integrating its use into employee onboarding, training, and performance evaluations.

COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

22	OBSERVATION	The Library's community engagement efforts are often reactive, resulting in untapped opportunities to better serve Berkeley's diverse community.
	RECOMMENDATION	Develop proactive community engagement practices to ensure library services address the needs and priorities of all community members.

Community engagement encompasses a wide range of approaches to empower citizens to express their views and influence decisions to best meet their needs. Currently, the Library does not proactively solicit input on library services from community members. Instead, input is mainly received through suggestion boxes, public meeting comments, online comments, or in-person conversations with front-line staff. The Library is fortunate to be part of a community with many actively engaged members. However, by relying on reactive efforts, the Library opens itself up to the risk of attending to the needs of those who use the Library most, have the privilege of access, or are the loudest, while neglecting the needs of others, including residents who are not currently engaged in the Library. In the all-staff survey, only 60% of respondents felt that the Library's services equitably serve the diverse interests of Berkeley's community.

The Library should implement a proactive and equitable community engagement approach to ensure the relevance of services and respond to community requests. To begin these efforts, the Library should consider using a framework to assess current engagement activities and identify opportunities for expansion. For example, the Community Engagement in Public Libraries framework[10] suggests six areas of proactive community engagement on which to focus:

- Partnerships in working with voluntary and community sector
- Partnerships in working with other public services towards community engagement
- Involvement of volunteers
- Community involvement in decision making
- Community involvement in relation to projects and programs
- Community involvement in relation to strategic decision making

Once gaps are identified, the Library should take steps to incorporate invitation-based community engagement activities. For instance, these could include:

- Consistent solicitation of program feedback: Provide comment cards to all event participants, and actively tracking and analyzing results.
- Exploration of new methods for community involvement in decision-making: Collaborate with the City to use Berkeley Considers, the online engagement tool used for the City's latest strategic planning process, to engage patrons in an easy, accessible, and convenient manner.
- Meeting people where they are: Utilize current outreach programs like Library on Wheels to solicit, track, and analyze feedback from people in their own neighborhoods.
- Partner with local organizations serving under-represented populations: Collaborate with local organizations with access to communities that have historically not been engaged in community discussions.

The American Library Association recommends a "turning outward" approach[11]—a step-by-step process developed by The Harwood Institute for Public Innovation that focuses libraries on better understanding their community, changing processes and attitudes to make conversations more community-focused,

[11] Turning Outward Resources for Libraries http://www.ala.org/tools/librariestransform/libraries-transforming-communities/resources-for-library-professionals adopting a proactive approach to community issues, and putting the aspirations of the community first. The Library should consider aspects of this approach, tailored to the local community, to proactively engage all facets of the Berkeley community. This engagement should result in identification of new, potentially innovative programming that promotes the Library as a cultural hub and inclusive public service.

COLLECTION MANAGEMENT

23	OBSERVATION	The Library is in the process of developing a Collection Management Plan.
	RECOMMENDATION	Utilize best practice research to inform the development of the Collection Management Plan.

The Library revised and adopted the Collection Management Policy in April 2017. Subsequently, Library management has been developing a related Collection Management Plan under the guidance of the Interim Director. The plan will detail the role of management and staff, strategies for collaborative decision-making, selection guidelines, deselection criteria, and other operational elements, procedures, and practices related to collections and policy implementation.

According to the American Library Association[12], a collection management policy should:

- Ensure that the selection of materials reflects the institution's philosophy, mission, guiding principles, or other foundational documents

- Provide a framework for the consistent selection and acquisition of library resources in all formats using a standard set of criteria

- Avoid haphazard patterns of acquisition that will result in waste or overlap of content

- State who is responsible for selection and the parameters under which the individual(s) work, but allows for professional judgment

- Ensure a diversity of viewpoints on all topics, including those that may be considered controversial

- Identify cooperative collection development arrangements such as resource sharing including interlibrary loans, agreements to purchase or lease e-content, and resource retention commitments; for example, archival materials, government documents, local author material

- Provide standards for collection maintenance and the removal of library resources that are out-of-date, inaccurate or no longer reflect the consensus of the field, in poor condition, rarely used, in an obsolete format, no longer fit the needs of library patrons, or have excess copies

- Supply guidelines for consideration of gifts and donations

- Establish a process by which individuals may share their concerns about Library resources in a discussion with a librarian or, if their concerns are unresolved, invoke a formal reconsideration process

- Affirm the importance of intellectual freedom, referencing key documents such as the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, the Library Bill of Rights, and the Freedom to Read Statement

[12] Selection and Reconsideration Policy Toolkit for Public, School, and Academic Libraries. http://www.ala.org/tools/challengesupport/selectionpolicytoolkit/why
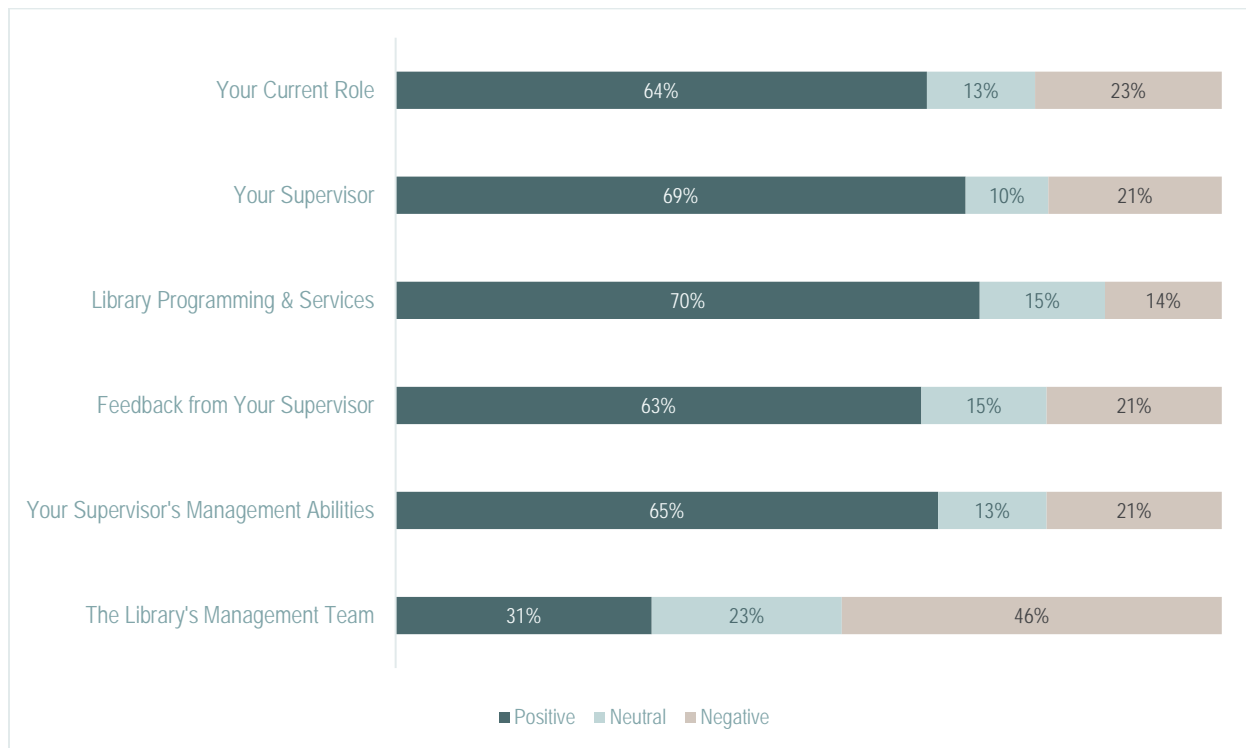

The American Library Association also points out that deselection is vital to collection maintenance, noting that an "optimal library collection is one that is reviewed on a consistent basis for accuracy, currency, usage, diversity, and subject area gaps." Once the Collection Management Policy is established, it is important that Library leadership and the BOLT are aligned with the new policy and publically support this work when engaging with staff and patrons.
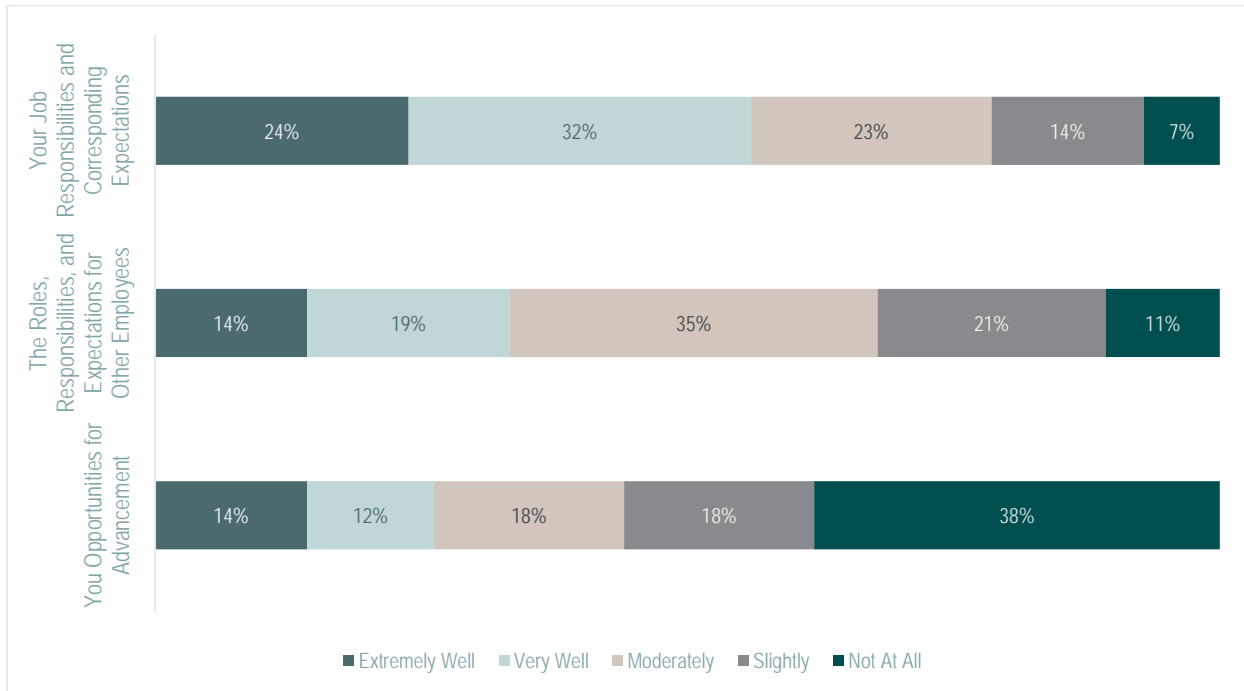

APPENDIX A: EMPLOYEE SURVEY RESULTS

All Library employees were invited to participate in a confidential survey that asked about Library strengths and opportunities for improvement. Of the 134 survey requests sent, we received 80 responses, a 59.7% response rate. Of these 80 respondents, six identified as a manager or supervisor, 12 identified as a first level supervisor, and 62 identified as not a manager or supervisor (i.e., front-line staff). While this survey is a useful tool to identify staff sentiment, the results are not statistically significant and it is not fully representative because participation was less than 100%.

BOARD OPERATING PROTOCOLS

We, the members of the Board of Directors of the Centralia School Library, are committed to serving the children and citizens of this community. We will strive to provide a high quality public education, which meets the needs of all the children in our Library.

To achieve that goal, we have established this operating protocol, which will serve as a code of conduct and ethics to help govern our actions at meetings and in our role as directors.

We believe that the success of the Centralia School Library depends on a shared vision among the school board, staff, parents and community, and we will try to the best of our ability to uphold these aspirations.

BOARD MEETINGS

Board meetings provide the forum for where decisions are made. We will:

- Strive to hold efficient, succinct, and equitable meetings.

- Review agenda items prior to board meetings.

- Request any additional information from the board president or superintendent.

- Ask the board president or superintendent to place an item on the agenda instead of bringing it up unexpectedly at the meeting.

- Ensure that surprises to the board or superintendent are the exception and not the rule.

- Expect the board president to be cautious of time and observe the board's protocol.

- Refer additional facts and information needed by the board to the superintendent for follow-up.

Executive Sessions will be held when specific needs arise as allowed by law. These needs include:

3. Acquiring or selling real estate

4. Qualifications of an application for employment by the board

5. Qualifications of a candidate for appointment to elective office such as a school director.

6. Discussion with legal counsel of enforcement actions, litigation or potential litigation

Regarding Executive Sessions, we will:

7. Be extremely sensitive to the legal ramifications of executive session meetings and comments.

8. Respect the confidentiality of all privileged information, including that discussed in executive session.

9. Discuss a permissible topic in executive session, but take final actions in public, as is required by the Open Public Meetings Act.

COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN THE BOARD AND STAFF

The following communications procedures are established:

10. Staff Communications to the Board
    a. All reports to the board or individual board members from principals, supervisors, teachers, or other staff members shall be submitted through the superintendent.

    b. Personal complaints and criticism received by board members will be referred to the appropriate supervisor or superintendent.

    c. This will not deny any staff member's right to appeal to the board regarding administrative decisions, provided that the superintendent will have been notified of the forthcoming appeal and that it is processed according to the applicable procedures on complaints and grievances.

11. Board Communications to Staff
    d. All official communications, policies, and directives of staff interest and concern will be communicated to staff members through the superintendent.

    e. The superintendent will employ all such media as are appropriate to keep staff fully informed of the board's priorities, concerns and actions.

    f. Requests for information from staff by board members will be taken to the superintendent. The superintendent will provide the information in a timely manner.

12. Visits to the School
    g. The typical process is for individual board members to inform the principal of their visit to the school or classrooms.

h. Such visits will be regarded as expressions of interest in school affairs and not as "inspections" or visits for supervisory or administrative purposes.

i. Official visits by board members will be carried on only under board authorization and with the full knowledge of staff, including the superintendent and principal

13. Social Interaction

j. Staff and board members share a keen interest in the schools and in education. When they meet at social affairs and other functions, informal discussion on such matters as educational trends, issues, and innovations can be anticipated.

k. Discussions of personalities or staff grievances are not appropriate.

WORKING WITH LIBRARY STAFF ABOUT OUR OWN CHILDREN

In order to work effectively with Library staff about our own children we agree to:

- Remember we are parents (grandparents) first.

- Follow the same process that we expect all parents to follow: meet with the teacher first, then follow the chain of command.

- Be clear that we are speaking to the teacher as a parent. (i.e., "My child is having this problem _____. How can I help them?")

- Understand that sometimes our spouse or significant other may be the right person to handle situation.

- Inform the superintendent of the situation regardless of the resolution.

BOARD AND COMMUNITY INTERACTION

Communication between board members and community (complaints or concerns) The board encourages public input through a variety of print and electronic media. In order to respond effectively to community members who share a concern or complaint with us, we agree to:

- Remember that receiving information from an individual or a group is not the same as having total knowledge of the topic or issue. There are usually two sides to every concern.

- Utilize the 6 R's to ensure the person speaking feels valued and heard:

  o Receive by listening openly to what the other person is saying.

  o Repeat by paraphrasing back or asking questions for clarification.

  o Request what the person sees as a solution to the problem and/or what they want you to do with the information. o Review the real options the person has available to them within the Library policies or processes.

  o Redirect the person into the appropriate place in the system:

    - Encourage patrons to present their own issue to the person who can properly and expeditiously address their issues

    - If appropriate, explain the Library complaint policy and how to access it. Report to the superintendent - Call the superintendent to give him a heads-up about the constituent issue so that the superintendent is able to understand the total picture.

    - Describe our response to the constituent so that the superintendent hears directly from us, and does not get caught in the middle. The superintendent will deal with the issue as necessary and when appropriate determine how best to inform the total board.

BOARD CONDUCT

We will:

- Lead by example. We use words and actions that create a positive impression on an individual, the board, or the Library.
- Base our decisions on the available facts and not independent judgment.
- Not yield to individuals or special interest groups.
- Represent the needs and interests of all the children in the Library as outlined in the Library's mission statement
- Not abuse our official position.
- Not use Library facilities, resources, or position for the purpose of advancing the interest of ourselves or any other individual or individuals.
- Make every attempt to attend all board functions, including committee meetings.
- Serve on committees as a silent observer or active participant, as defined by the board.
- Accept responsibility for all board decisions, regardless of how we voted and not offer a different opinion outside the boardroom.
- Take no private actions that will compromise the board or administration.
- Endeavor to hear all members' opinions and listen objectively.
- Encourage debate and differing points of view.
- Conduct discussions with care and respect.

THE BOARD'S AUTHORITY

We recognize:

- That only the board as a whole has authority.
- That individual board members do not have authority.
- That the board president is the spokesman for the board.
- That the board emphasizes planning, policy-making and public relations rather than being involved in the management of school operation.
- That an individual board member will not take unilateral action.
- The individual directors do not give direction. Direction is given by the board as a whole.

We will:

- Exercise oversight responsibilities through policy, planning, advocacy and public relations.
- Avoid attempts to micro-manage the schools.
- Delegate the management of the schools to the superintendent.
- Set clear goals for the superintendent.

BOARD- SUPERINTENDENT RELATIONSHIP

- Surprises to the board or the superintendent will be the exception, not the rule.
- The board recognizes the superintendent as the chief executive officer and expects recommendations, proposals and suggestion on most matters before the board.

- The board president meets with the superintendent and keeps all board members informed of board matters/information.
- Prior to a board meeting, each board director meets individually or in pairs with the superintendent to share concerns, ask questions, or to bring forth a future agenda item for consideration of the board.

BOARD AND SUPERINTENDENT ROLES IN NEGOTIATIONS

We will:

- Define the philosophical and financial parameters for negotiations.
- Trust our negotiating team to do the best job that they can.

APPENDIX G: EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR SUCCESS THEMES

As part of this assessment, interviewees were asked what characteristics would help a new Director be successful. As a resource for the upcoming recruitment process, the following summarizes five commonly mentioned themes that were expressed during these conversations.

COLLABORATIVE

The most commonly mentioned trait was collaboration. Many stakeholders reported a successful Director will need to know how to listen, take in feedback from many perspectives, and help people feel heard, even if their input is not ultimately acted upon. Having a true open door policy was an important characteristic. Equally as important is the ability to communicate decisions and manage change in a way that builds trust.

PACED AND PATIENT

A frequently repeated note of caution was the next Director should not join the organization and immediately try to implement a new vision. To be successful, they need to take time to get to know staff, understand underlying social dynamics, and appreciate current services and programs. They need to balance an urgency for positive change with the patience to move deliberatively. Likewise, they may need to take the long view of success and not be frustrated if progress is slow.

SKILLED AT NAVIGATING POLITICAL ENVIRONMENTS

The Library has many invested stakeholders. A successful Director will need to be able to work equally well with staff, management, the Board, union representatives, community members, and other stakeholders.

COMMUNITY-CENTERED

For the Library to thrive, all employees from the top down need to be focused on community and patron needs. Berkeley has many distinctive traits, and many stakeholders noted that a new executive director needs to recognize this community's unique opportunities and challenges.

COMMITTED TO THE LIBRARY

A successful Director will be committed to seeing Library succeed because they are dedicated to its mission, its people, and its community. Rather than seeing the position as a stepping stone to other opportunities, they will be ready to dig in and tackle challenges to help the Library thrive. In the words of one staff member, "we need someone who wants to fall in love with the Berkeley Public Library."

UNIVERSITY OF GLASGOW CHANGE MANAGEMENT PLAN TEMPLATE[19]

Introduction

Provide background, link to strategic goals and other changes

Project Sponsor

This person leads the change project and is accountable for ensuring the project and change plan are implemented

Project Objectives

Detail what the project will achieve.

Change Objectives and Principles

Provide details of:
- What the change process will achieve [e.g. information sharing, engagement, input into system changes];
- Principles that underpin the change plan [e.g. inclusiveness/consultation, timeliness]; and
- Ethical issues that need to be considered and how will the change plan will address them.

Change Plan Elements

What are the main elements in the change plan? [e.g. people/culture, systems/technology, documentation, positions/roles, process, skills] Each of these elements may require a particular focus in the change plan.

Rationale for the Change

List the drivers and constraints for change.
What are the risks for the change process?

[19] Source: https://www.gla.ac.uk/media/media_359005_en.pdf

Key Stakeholder Analysis

Identify the key stakeholders [consider staff, other colleagues in the University, management, unions, students and other clients] and:

- Analyse their response to the change [e.g. what will be their main concerns/fear, where is there likely to be support for the change];
- Identify their needs in terms of change management and consider the style of communication required [language style & level]; and
- Identify the preferred media for communicating or consulting with them about the change [e.g. sessions involving dialogue about the changes, newsletters, briefings from project team members, frequently asked questions].

Assessment of Readiness to Change

Comment on the status of the change so far [e.g. is there a high level strategy in place that stakeholders are already aware of and committed to that provides a framework for the change].
What elements might support the change [e.g. dissatisfaction with current processes; a workplace culture that supports change and innovation].
Is there strong senior support for the change?

Key Change Messages

Identify about 6 key messages to convey about the change process, being upfront about gains and losses. Consider:

- What will be gained/lost for the key stakeholder groups in the change process;
- The messages from the stakeholder perspective;
- What will be their main concerns; and
- Presenting changes in a positive light even whilst acknowledging loss.

Identify Change Elements

Structures/Processes/Responsiblities/Resources/Timeframes/Performance Measures
Consider the need for particular change support structures [e.g. a change team, super users/specialists who are trained first and can support people in the workplace, involvement of users/key stakeholders at various stages, change champions in the workplace].
Consider if there is a need for transitional arrangements to support and whether the introduction of the change process needs to be staged.
What will be the impact on workloads and how will these be managed?

Develop Change Plan

Develop a change plan including performance measures [how will you know the change plan is effective?].
Ensure the plan is adequately resourced.
Include a communications plan

Actions	Who	When	Performance Measures

Consolidation

Ensure policies, procedures and performance measures reinforce the changes.
Remove organisational barriers to the change.
Reinforce how changes have provided benefits.

Evaluation

How will the change be evaluated in relation to the achievement of the planned objectives?
How will the change management processes be evaluated – consider summative as well as final evaluations, how can you assess your change management strategies as you implement them?
How will the evaluation outcomes be circulated and promoted to stakeholders?
How will evaluation outcomes be used in other organisational processes?

BUILD NONPROFIT CHANGE MANAGEMENT PLANNING TEMPLATE[20]

(1) Define the Change		(2) Identify the Impacts			(3) Prepare for the Impacts
Process Area	Process Description	Stakeholder Groups Impacted	Impact Description	Impact Rating	Job Impacts	Activating Leadership	What to communicate?	What training is required?	Recommended Project Involvement
A short description (3 to 5 words) for the change you are undertaking. Try to list each specific process area that is changing. A 'process' is a specific set of steps that you follow to achieve a particular objective. You have to strike a balance between being too high-level and too granular. This will become clearer as you continue to practice this activity.	A more detailed description of what is included in the process area.	List groups here that are impacted by this change. If different groups are affected in uniquely different ways, then each group should have its own row.	Describe the specific impact to this group of this change. Please be specific.	Build Consulitng recommends that you use only "high" and "low." High means that this group has changes that signficantly affect their work. "Low" means that it has a small affect on their work and they may only need to be informed.	Describe if and how the change affects the job description, responsibilities or evaluation criteria for this group.	Describe who is required to provide highly visible leadership to ensure that this change is successful. This can include members of the executive team, the project sponsor, and/or the manager responsible for this part of the business.	Describe how and when this group needs to be communicated with.	Does this group require training, what type and when.	Does the impact on this group dictate that at least a representative of this group be inolved in the design, testing, training or rollout of the change? If change involves a system selection is this group adequately represented in that process?
